$1,000,000 Well Spent
Some Dirigibles, Please
What the Voice Answered
Arabia the Blessed

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

"WITH a humble and thankful heart," President Roosevelt tells the nation listening on the radio that he accepts the large sum raised to help poor children suffering from infantile paralysis. Ten million Americans danced, ate, listened patiently to speeches, and the result is over a million dollars to be spent fighting disease and diminishing suffering, besides giving the President great pleasure, in connection with his fifty-second birthday.

That is better than shooting off fireworks or having an expensive review of a great army, or elaborate fleet; we show common sense in some things.

Uncle Sam will spend four hundred and seventy-five million dollars on new fighting craft, and the big dirigible Los Angeles is to be destroyed. The government should include in its program at least two giant dirigibles, one to replace the Los Angeles, one to replace the Akron, sacrificed to incompetency and a foolish navy rule that takes a commander from a dirigible as soon as he has learned to run it and puts him on a floating ship.

Leaving out all other considerations, what would this country, in time of war, give for one or two dirigibles, on either coast, thousands of feet in the air, spying out enemy aircraft, aircraft carriers, submarines, and sending information to headquarters as movable "lookout towers," patrolling our coasts. Dirigibles in war time would be invaluable, providing far-seeing eyes for fleet and army.

Mr. B. Forman, of Rochester, whom depression does not depress tells about a "worried American business man."

Bowed down with care, he walked alone into the forest to commune with nature, lay down, and said aloud: "Oh, Lord, how long must I suffer as I am suffering now?"

A strange voice answered: "About two years."

Startled, the man got up, looked around, saw nobody, tried another question.

"And, Lord, what will come after that?"

The same voice answered: "Oh, by that time you will get used to it!"

"Oh, to be in England, now that April's there," will be changed by many who listen to the Rev. Dr. Storm, missionary from Arabia, to "Oh, to be in Arabia all the year round."

In Arabia, says the Rev. Dr. Storm, the average man works for five cents a day at herding cattle, date culture, or diving a day. "Arabians support as many as four wives, and keep several concubines and slaves." That seems to be a chance, for a local NRA to improve wage conditions. But what a country!

Three courageous Russian scientists, Pavil Fedosenko, Andrey Wasenko and Ilya Vayndin, whose names will be forgotten as soon as they are read, outside of Russia, sacrificed their lives in exploration of the air.

They went up 67,585 feet, breaking all records, as high as though they had piled sixty-seven and a half Eiffel towers, one on top of the other, and climbed up.

It was the highest ascent on record, and also the longest fall, when the gas bag crashed, broke away from the gondola and returned to the clouds.

All over the world men are willing to die in the cause of science, a better death than dying in an unjust war, and with fewer victims.

Uncle Sam now owns all the gold in the United States, and, by ingeniously increasing its price raises its "value" from three thousand five hundred millions to more than seven thousand two hundred and nineteen millions.

Perhaps making the gold ounce worth forty dollars instead of twenty will work out that way. If it does, it should be simple to raise the price again from forty dollars to eighty, and become really rich.

But it is all uncertain, for nobody knows anything about money, what or why it is, or how it works. A little guessing and experiment may do good.

Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, young English flier, arrested in Florida, and accused by officers of running away from them, hitting, biting and scratching, makes one reasonable complaint. She was stopped on the highway at 6 o'clock in the morning by three men dressed in civilian clothes. How could she know that they were officers of the law, not robbers or worse?

No man, except in uniform, should be allowed to stop automobiles. In these days when every other man may be and

'STARVED BY RUDY,' FAY VALLEE SAYS

Saves Two Boys on Ice Off Quincy

Firemen with an inhalator battled in vain today for the life of Mrs. Bridget Connolly, 70, of Gold st., South Boston. She was found unconscious with a gas jet open, apparently accidentally. Firemen Joseph Black and Eben Phillips and others worked over her for hours.

Two Boys Saved on Ice by Man in Pajamas

Roy Allen was out on a party until the early hours of today—and because of that the lives of two 5-year-old Quincy boys were saved as they clung to floe ice off Merrymount Beach.

Sleeping late, Allen and his wife, in their home at 76 Norton rd., Quincy, were wakened by cries coming from the water across the way. Mrs. Allen peered out a window and saw two boys clinging to floating ice 25 feet from shore.

Clad in his pajamas, Allen leaped out of bed, raced across the street and dived into the freezing tide. He reached the boys, returned them to the shore and gave them into the hands of a policeman who arrived in a cruiser car.

The rescued lads, Richard Clark of 76 Pontale rd. and Peter Fitzgerald of 88 Assabet rd., had been playing on the ice when the incoming tide lifted and broke it, plunging them into the water.

It was the second near-drowning in the Clark family in less than two months, the first one almost resulting in the loss of two other sons, one 10 and the other 12 years old.

The brothers had gone out on the ice to rescue a dog a mile farther along the beach and were being carried out into the harbor on an ice flow when police rescued them.

BUYING SURGE IN GOLD WAKE

In London the dollar advanced.

In Paris, however, the dollar dipped.

Trading on the New York Stock Exchange was the most active market in months. The gold shares showed most strength, Homestake gained $9 before meeting profit taking. Lesser advances were made by Alaska Juneau, McIntyre and dome.

Dollar strength in London was accompanied by scenes approaching pandemonium. Dealers were swamped. The dollar closed in London at between $4.96 to $4.97 with relation to pound sterling.

Europeans rushed to buy dollars and shipped them back to the United States for use in particlestring in the boom on the New York Stock Exchange brought about by the devaluation policy.

Heavy profit-taking appeared in the last half hour but stocks strengthened in the last few minutes giving the market a strong tone. Transfers approximated 4,500,000 shares.

FAY WEBB ON $100 A WEEK IS 'WRECK'

Rudy's Wife Suffering Many Ailments, She Says in New Suit

New York, Feb. 1 (INS)—Fay Webb Vallee is suffering from nervous exhaustion, secondary anemia, malnutrition, heart trouble and loss of weight—all on the $100 a week which Rudy gives her.

Fay's description of herself was given today in an affidavit filed with Supreme Court Justice Lydon in another round of her court fight with the crooner.

Another affidavit filed by Fay's attorney also charged that "Valley well knows that he is largely responsible for his wife's ailments."

Rudy himself filed an affidavit, as did Hyman Bushel, his counsel, and with them they submitted a photograph of Fay in evening dress about to start out for a large evening in Hollywood, accompanied by two escorts, Jack Hartfield, Hollywood broker, and Pasquals de Cicco, husband of Thelma Todd.

The picture, taken last May, is intended to refute Fay's claim that her weight has fallen off from a normal 125 to 98.

There were six affidavits filed.

CALLS IT "LOOT"

Bushel asked "who is financing this litigation for such ultimate final loot?"—the "loot being the $50,000 counsel fees, $7450 a month alimony and $10,000 court expenses sought by Fay from Rudy.

The affidavits were filed in behalf of and in answer to Rudy's motion to set aside Justice Lydon's order allowing Fay to withdraw her local suit in which she seeks

A Navy Second to None

NOW YOU'RE TALKING!—Says the country to Congress, as news is borne to it of the approval by the House of Representatives of the greatest naval building program ever presented in peace time.

As a matter of fact, it is not "talking" which the country means to say, but ACTING—and with a vigor, point and sweep which the people have long implored of Congress and now at last witness!

The bill was passed with a mighty chorus of ayes. A roll call was not needed. Sponsored by Chairman Vinson of the naval affairs committee and assured of the approval of the administration, the bill calls for the construction of 102 new warships and 1184 fighting planes.

It contemplates the expenditure of 570 million dollars!

It will make the United States Navy just what IT OUGHT TO BE and just what the people long ago determined that it should be—SECOND TO NONE that sails the seas, in tonnage, scientific perfection and effectiveness measured by the most modern standards.

THE persistent indifference to the navy's needs shown by three Republican administrations and the years of inexcusable neglect which have had their natural result in a steady decline of the navy's strength, are now abruptly ended.

Neglect of the national security has ceased to be an American policy,—thanks to an administration which is alive to the country's interests and able to read correctly and to reflect promptly the mind of the American people.

The action now at last taken by Congress marks the fruition of sustained and earnest labors on the part of the Hearst newspapers. It is naturally a source of gratification and deep satisfaction.

Ever since the outbreak of the World War, when it became apparent that the neutrality which the United States wished to observe lacked the force behind it to make it respected by the belliger-

KIDNAP KING MAY FACE LINDY IN QUIZZING

Admits Abduction of Two as U. S. Agents Continue Grilling

TODAY'S FACTS

Surprise arrest in Chicago of Verne Sankey, called Public Enemy No. 1 and King of Kidnapers, has lead today to:

Calling of federal agents who took part in the Lindbergh kidnaping investigation to Chicago to quiz Sankey on that crime;

Reports that Col. Lindbergh will personally join the inquiry;

Confession by Sankey that he took part in the abduction of Charles Boettcher II of Denver and Haskell Bohn of St. Paul, and

Picture and Other Story, Page 14

By GEORGE C. GALLATI
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

The tireless government men who captured Sankey, confessed kidnaper, reinforced by eastern agents who have dedicated their lives to capturing the Lindbergh killers, grilled Sankey throughout the night and day. Throughout the questioning concerning the Lindbergh case, Sankey, 42-year-old South Dakota rancher, who turned kidnaper, maintained his innocence.

REVERT TO LINDY CASE

The federal men, however, proposing to leave no stone unturned, continued questioning Sankey and reverted again and again to the Lindbergh murder.

At the same time, reports were current in New York that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh would come here to participate in the questioning of Sankey on the kidnaping and murder of the flier's son.

These reports could not be confirmed and Col. Lindbergh could not be reached. At New Jersey state police headquarters it was said that some one familiar with

LATE NEWS BULLETINS

TIMID GUNMAN FLEES GIRL IN BEDROOM

A timid burglar fled empty-handed today when Mary Cristo of 123 Howland st., Roxbury, surprised him ransacking a bedroom in her home. Although carrying a revolver, he backed out of the room, threatening to shoot her if she did not remain quiet.

BYRD SUPPLY SHIP RACES CRUMBLING ICE

3 CWA Workers Buried by Sand

Springfield, Feb. 1—Police with pulmotors were sent to Flagg sand pit, near Memorial golf course, today to assist in saving three CWA workers, buried when tons of sand slid.

First reports said the men were alive, but it was not determined whether any had been hurt or whether they had been completely or only partially buried by the slide.

Seek to Divert Road Funds

Suspension for one year of state highway work, and diverting the highway fund to the building of town roads was advocated at a hearing today before the legislative committee on highways and motor vehicles by A. E. Zetterman, president of the Massachusetts Selectmen's Association.

$6000 PLUM TO JOHN F.'S SON

Thomas Acton Fitzgerald, eldest son of John F. Fitzgerald, Boston's former mayor who supported Mayor Mansfield in the last campaign, was today appointed to the $6000 a year post street commissioner.

He succeeds John J. O'Callaghan, who retired last night. Fitzgerald is married, and is a World War veteran, having served in the ammunition train of the 301st Infantry.

The appointment threatened a split among Mayor Mansfield's supporters, many of whom were advocating Edmund Giblin of Jamaica Plain for the position.

Fitzgerald registered from 39 Welles ave., Dorchester, Jan. 14 and was carried in the police listing last April from that address. His telephone number is in the Newton office, however, and it is claimed that he is really a resident of that city.

Gibson Sworn In as U. S. Senator

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—Former Rep. Ernest W. Gibson was sworn in today as the new senator from Vermont, succeeding the late Senator Dale. Gibson, a Republican, was elected at a special election recently.

WORK MORE, EARN MORE, SPEND MORE IN 1934

State Auto Cashier Sobs Out: 'I Stole $3500'

"I'm Charles A. Wheeler from the state auditor's department here to make an audit," announced the stranger.

Hodgdon's face blanched. He sat quietly for a minute without answering. Then he stood up and began to weep.

"All right," he said. "But before you begin I want to tell you you will find a shortage of approximately $3500 in my accounts."

HIS WIFE IS ILL

Wheeler was dumfounded. He said that when questioned, the cashier, a civil service appointee and veteran employe of the registry, said he had taken the money in small amounts over a period of several months from a $25,000 fund known as the employes' advance fund, from which advances on salaries may be drawn by registry and other public works employes.

He quoted Hodgdon:

"I hope to be able to make restitution. I hope I can pay every penny of it back."

Hodgdon lives in Belmont. He is married and his wife is ill.

Wheeler notified Auditor Francis X. Hurley, and Deputy Auditor Michael Kelleher was sent to assist him in the examination of records.

Hodgdon is bonded for $10,000 by the Fidelity Bonding & Assurance Co., which firm was notified by Registrar Ryan.

Hodgdon annually handles about $6,000,000 in registry funds. He receives an annual salary of $3000.

ON JOB 20 YEARS

He is 38 years old and has been employed in the public works department for about 20 years, starting there as an office boy.

In addition to his duties at the registry he wrote insurance, mostly on automobiles.

His marriage, about 10 years ago, was the culmination of a romance at the registry. His wife, who was Alice M. O'Brien, worked in the cashier's department there.

BRINE BABY BOY SMOTHERS

Christopher Brine, the six-months-old son of William H. Brine, president of the W. H. Brine Co., fish goods dealer, was smothered to death in his crib today.

The baby's mother found him wedged under the bed clothes in the nursery on the second floor of the Brine home at 54 Nathan rd., Newton Center. She immediately called Dr. D. G. Nutter, also of Newton Center, and he, in turn, summoned the fire department.

However, Capt. Michael H. Turner and five men of Ladder 2, Newton Highlands, used an inhalator in vain. Dr. Nutter pronounced the child dead.

U. S. AIMS AT WORLD GOLD PACT WITH PROFIT FOR ALL

Stabilization Fund Details Kept Secret by Morgenthau; Treasury Has Near 700 Millions in Metal

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—The United States was described by Secretary Morgenthau as being on a "1934 model of a gold bullion standard" as a result of the dollar devaluation program, which netted the Government a $2,792,940,517 profit.

Morgenthau refused to discuss operation of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund created out of the devaluation profits. Its use is to be kept strictly secret.

In other administration quarters, it was said that in its monetary actions the United States wanted the whole world to go along and share in any recovery that might develop.

NAMES GOLD AGENT

Secretary Morgenthau expanded the gold purchase regulations to specify that the New York Federal Reserve Bank will buy imported gold bars. It will act as the Treasury's agent.

"Purchases will be made at the rate of $35 per fine troy ounce, less the usual mint charges and less ¼ of 1 per cent for handling charges, all subject to compliance with the regulations issued under the gold reserve act of 1934," he said.

Creation of an expert committee of 10 to assist Secretary Morgenthau administer the two billion dollar stabilization fund was approved today by the ways and means committee as an item in the 206 million dollar revenue bill.

In his first press conference since President Roosevelt's devaluation proclamation, Morgenthau was asked whether abandonment of the gold standard by France would mean a world embargo on gold shipments. His reply was that such developments would be taken under advisement.

Morgenthau said the advisers in guiding the dollar would be a "flexible sifting group."

Advice of different experts will be sought from time to time, he said, pointing out that yesterday's White House conference included himself, Governor Eugene Black of the federal reserve board, Governor George L. Harrison of the New York Reserve Bank, Professors Georgs F. Warren and James H. Rogers and Herman Oliphant, the treasury's general counsel.

The nation's gold supply was announced at the Treasury today to comprise $4,029,982,886.86 on the old dollar basis. That was the value of the gold to which the government took title on Tuesday, but revaluation of the dollar at 59.06 per cent increases the value of the gold to about $6,800,000,000, with the profit going to the government.

By his unprecedented step yesterday, the President held that until "further notice" the dollar was revalued at 59.06 percent of its previous gold content and that the treasury would offer $35 an ounce for "any and all gold."

FISHER VISIONS U. S.-BANK WAR

Washington, Feb. 1 (INS)—Possibility of war between bankers and President Roosevelt was envisioned today by Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale University, testifying before a House bank subcommittee.

Fisher endorsed a bill to create a federal monetary authority to take over the money issuing privilege of the Federal Reserve System and conduct a managed currency.

Creation of Federal monetary authority was described as a compromise between proposals of those who would destroy the Federal Reserve system entirely and those who would maintain it intact.

IF IT'S FROM THE CONTINENTAL, IT'S DEPENDABLE!

We Are Grateful
(and we should be)

YESTERDAY the Continental completed its 62nd year as a dependable store for men. It has been a 12-month record of which we are proud and deeply grateful. We have shown an increase in customers and an increase in total business. We are wholeheartedly supporting the N. R. A. code and we have kept our prices down. Never once have we knowingly departed from our policy that "If it's from the Continental, it's dependable." Our roster of dependable names includes Hart, Schaffner & Marx, Arrow, Florsheim, Interwoven, Stetson, Reis and Hickok. The success of our wardrobe budget plan permitting ten equal weekly payments without interest or carrying charges has justified our belief that it would be a real service to our customers. For all of which we are grateful and happy at the beginning of our 63rd year as a New England institution.

Sunny Climes Call Curley

EX-MAYOR CURLEY MARY CURLEY

Entitled to a well-earned rest after four years of directing the city through the most critical period in its history, ex-Mayor Curley is off to Southern climes and Pacific isles with his daughter, Mary. They waved adieu to Boston from the steps of the Merchants Limited. In Washington for a few hours today they will entrain for Florida and six weeks of carefree globe-trotting. (Boston American photo.)

CURLEYS VISIT IN CAPITAL

Former Mayor Curley and his daughter, Mary, are in Washington today and will spend several hours there before leaving for Palm Beach, where they will vacation two weeks before starting their long jaunt to the West Coast.

The former mayor and his daughter left Boston for New York, accompanied by Judge Emil Fuchs. They were given a warm send-off by more than 100 friends at South Station.

After their visit to the Florida resort the former mayor and his daughter plan to leave for Los Angeles and may go from there to Hawaii.

JAP WAR HEAD DECRIES PLOT

Tokio, Feb. 1 (AP)—There will be no Russo-Japanese war, "unless the war is carried to us by the other side," Gen. Senjuro Hayashi told Associated Press today in the first interview since his appointment as War Minister, succeeding Gen Sadao Araki.

"We are making no preparations for war with Russia," the general said flatly.

"Our dispositions in Manchuria are merely aimed at fulfilling our treaty obligations to defend Manchukuo.

"We are out for peace. Charges by Soviet leaders in speeches that the Japanese army is plotting seizure of Russia's maritime province of Northern Sagha lien are absurd.

"No responsible officer in the Japanese army harbors any such designs or ambitions."

Of relations between Japan and the United States, Hayashi said:

"I am incapable of conceiving any Japanese-American differences justifying any belief in a future Japanese-American war.

"When the Japanese navy insists on increased ratios, Americans should understand that does not mean preparations are being made to fight America.

"We are merely trying to fill the gaps in our national defenses."

5 MILLION MADE IN AIR SHARES

Washington, Feb. 1 (INS)—A $5,895,311 profit was made by National City Co., of New York, in two underwritings of United Aircraft and Transport Corp. stock, it was revealed today at the Senate air mail investigation.

J. P. Ripley, former City Co. vice-president, revealed the existence of a "preferential list" of customers for the air shares.

The stock flotations which proved so profitable to National City and the preferred customers were made in 1929 and 1930.

Charles P. Mitchell, former president of the National City Co., was identified as the author of a memorandum setting forth the plan to list preferred customers in on the ground floor of United Aircraft financing.

The preferred customers bought their stock at $30 per share. A short time later it opened on the exchange at approximately $80.

BIG NAVAL PLAN THREATENED IN SENATE

Controversy Over Building Profit Seen as Threat to Plan

Washington, Feb. 1 (INS)—A minor controversy over shipbuilding profits today threatened an indefinite delay in final enactment of the administration's $580,000,000 program for construction of a full treaty strength navy.

The bill's prompt passage by the Senate was retarded by a decision of Senator Trammell (D.) of Florida, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, to hold hearings on the measure, just passed by the House. His committee previously reported a similar Senate bill favorably.

The delay served to prevent immediate consideration of the bill by the Senate and threatened to toss it into a legislative jam of appropriation bills. Senator Robinson, Democratic floor leader, announced he was ready now to sidetrack all other legislation, but could not guarantee any fixed time for action on the navy bill, after the appropriation bills come before the Senate.

Trammell explained the delay was due to the House's action in writing a 10 per cent profit line on the gross cost to shipbuilding firms and in dividing the shipbuilding work between private and public yards.

Administration leaders were provoked by the delay. They pointed out the independent offices appropriation bill would be reported to the Senate today and consideration started tomorrow.

This measure will include two distinct battles over elimination of federal pay slashes and restoration of pre-economy benefits to World War veterans. Once these issues are settled, a flood of appropriation bills will pour into the Senate.

As a result of the Navy committee's delay, the naval bill will be caught behind these two legislative contests. Its consideration will be postponed until next week, when it must be sidetracked again to make way for other appropriation bills.

MISS GOLDMAN BACK IN U. S.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Feb. 1 (AP)—Emma Goldman, America's most notorious anarchist for almost a generation, returned to the United States today from a 15 years' exile.

She entered from Canada, crossing the International Bridge here at 10:50 a. m.

Miss Goldman, now 64, was exiled from the United States in 1919 for her radical activities and has spent the past 15 years wandering and preaching in foreign lands.

A Navy Second to None

ent powers, the Hearst papers have advocated a navy at least equal to the strongest.

BEFORE the war had ended, the last Democratic administration was firmly committed to a program of naval building that would have made the American fleet the strongest on the seas.

That program was already well advanced when it encountered a fatal check and suffered a treasonable reversal in the Disarmament Conference held in Washington in 1922, which will be forever a source of mortification to Americans.

It was at this conference that the then Secretary of State, Charles Evans Hughes, made the sorry offer, which was greeted with such acclaim by England, France, Japan and Italy, to scrap the rapidly growing naval ascendancy of the United States and to voluntarily sink thousands of tons of recently built and modern naval shipping, which had cost the American people hundreds of millions of dollars!

With all the vigor at our command the Hearst papers protested against this fatuous and suicidal blunder, but without avail.

We have never ceased to characterize this act as one of inconceivable stupidity, and we have striven ever since to open the eyes of Congress and to awaken our people to the vital importance of retrieving so ghastly an error of policy by the resumption of naval building.

The fight seems won!

WE shall have a navy of adequate cruising range, speed, power and accuracy of gunfire, together with sufficient auxiliary vessels of all types, necessary to give the maximum effectiveness to our fleet as a whole.

In short, we shall have a navy fully up to the strength authorized by the London naval treaty.

This is as far as the United States can go at the present time, and it will bring us up to the full measure of strength permitted under existing international agreements.

If these quotas are subsequently revised, or if the London treaty fails of renewal, or if some power more ambitious than others seeks to disturb existing ratios,—why then the United States, with a justified composure and knowledge of its strength, will be able to take care of itself,—no matter what the game may be!

AND, ONE THING MORE IS CERTAIN—WE WILL NOT START, WHEN THAT GAME OPENS, AT A DISABLING DISADVANTAGE RELATIVE TO ANY POWER IN THE WORLD!

League Lobbyists Seeking to Raise Issue Again; See U. S. as 'Glutton for Punishment'

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD
Noted Author and U. S. Ambassador to Italy Under Two Administrations

Washington, Feb. 1—Despite the assumption that the World Court issue cannot be squeezed into the business of this congressional session, there is a quiet boring going on by the old World Court lobbies.

Those senators who have been bored have in many instances said—"Oh yes, yes, yes," believing that the time to vote and the final "no" was far away.

It is inconceivable that this propaganda weed still raises its stalks unless it does so under the slogan: "Uncle Sam—a Glutton for Punishment."

EUROPE PROFITLESS TO U. S.

No one in Congress can point to any excursion we have made into European politics which has not been disastrous not only to ourselves, but also to Europeans. The only profit to Americans can be found in a basketful of degrees and decorations for the heaving chests of our volunteer amateur statesmen and world-fixers.

Just such amateurs as these are telling us again today that the World Court is not political when all of us know that it is a creature of the League and that its decisions have reeked with politics.

Just such amateurs are saying to senators and probably will continue to say that if we put our head in the noose we are permitted by legal reservations to draw it out.

This is nonsense because most intelligent schoolboys know that withdrawal from international entanglements is not a legal question at all, but a dangerous political nose-ring, involving blasts of hatred from the controlled press of Europe and no end of a row in our political structure in case we wanted to pull loose.

But what gives the whole subject warmth of interest for Congress at this moment is the possibility that the World Court might well extend its jurisdiction so that some countries which welsh on debts could be asked to step before a world tribunal and tell their sad story to the judges. Let evidence be offered under oath, if honor is going by the board—it may as well go to the bottom.

WHAT ABOUT DEBTS OWED U. S.

Hence, those European propagandists and their well meaning allies here in America can do nothing better in their lost cause to put us into the World Court than to induce the European member or adherent nations to offer the World Court to us as an instrument for impartial and judicial findings on three simple questions.

Was the money we loaned borrowed on solemn promises?

Was it paid back?

Why not?

Not only should this procedure apply to intergovernmental debts of some eleven billions owed to us, but also to the seven billions owed to more than 500,000 Americans, some of them now in poverty, who loaned money to foreign municipalities and governmental subdivisions through our international bankers' cocktail bonds.

For this tip to the World Court lobby no gratitude can be expected. But a caution may also be given: There is grave doubt that the European statesmen who want us in the League and World Court will carry a spear in the burlesque show when, as, and if the World Court becomes a fact-finding sounding board for repudiation of international obligations.

often is a gangster, temptation to shoot instead of stopping your car is great and reasonable. You almost admire the moderation of Mrs. Mollison, who only scratched and bit a little, if she did. She says she "only hit, did not bite, kick or scratch, as alleged."

U. S. Flag Award

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—Sen. Reynolds, (D) North Carolina, announced today the U. S. Flag Asso. would award a newly created decoration for "outstanding service in advancement of law enforcement."

An advocate of nudism, which means going around with nothing on, says that six years from now there will be one million nudists in the United States, and the thought pleased him. There are more nudists than that in the African jungles now, up in the trees, and although they do have the decency to wear fur, that does not help Africa's civilization.

It is what you do inside of your head, not how you decorate the outside of your body, that makes you useful or otherwise.

You could not possibly think going around naked except to think how silly you must look.

Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under President Hoover, tells Kansas Republicans, that the goings on under President Roosevelt alarm him. "We have to run back many centuries," says he, "to the days of absolute autocracy, to find so great a power. The lives of millions of men lie in the hands of a single, fallible human being. Silence is not a virtue." The country is doing things, brand new, but the average American will reply that something had to be done, and inevitably "a single fallible human being" had to do it. This country has experimented thoroughly with the policy of doing nothing.

And, while it is true that many billions are being spent, some, perhaps, not with the wisdom of angels, at least, all the money is staying in the United States, spent in stores, feeding families, relieving distress and depression. It isn't being sent to Europe.

Important gold-strikes in the Kalgoorlie region of West Australia have brought thousands of foreigners. Australia's motto is "Australia for Australians." Foreigners are not liked or wanted, and several were killed, many buildings owned by foreigners burned in riots yesterday.

Each people may do what it likes about its own country, but Australians, living close under the shadow of sixty million Japanese in their overcrowded islands, may wish some day that they had made white population more welcome. They are only a handful now, and their territory is tempting.

Rome, Feb. 1—Information that Japan is not only secretly fortifying mandated islands near the Philippines and Guam but that Tokio is also storing huge quantities of fuel in these islands for naval and aerial purposes, is in the hands of Italian military authorities, Universal Service learned today.

Reports reaching military circles here state Japan is buying up as much fuel as possible from the rich petroleum fields of Borneo, and already has almost trebled her normal purchases there.

Italian quarters also are informed that Japan is pushing forward with an unprecedented program of military and naval construction for 1934. With indications that her strength in warships, submarines, torpedoes, mines and other naval armaments will exceed that of the United States in a few years.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Feb. 1 (INS)—Rt. Rev. Bishop James Dow Morrison, 89, of the Episcopal church died here last night after a long illness. He had been retired for many years.

STALIN WORLD CHALLENGE CHEERED

Council President Reveals Soviet Arms Strength

Moscow, Feb. 1 (AP)—The unqualified support of the All-Union Communist party is Joseph Stalin's today in his stand for a "keep-off-the-grass" foreign policy and preparedness for any emergency.

In a gesture the like of which never had been seen before, the 17th party congress roared approval of his spectacular report an unprecedented mandate of confidence.

"We warn everybody," they heard Stalin sternly declare last week, "not to poke their swinish snouts into the Soviet potato patch."

"It is a mistake to think an ambition to wage war against the Soviet Union and share its territory is held only by Japanese military circles.

"We know very well that it is shared by some political circles in Europe."

This last, it was believed, was intended as a reference to Germany.

The Soviet Union produced "many more tanks, heavy artillery and machine guns in 1933 than in 1932," Ordzhonokidzie, president of the Supreme Economic Council, declared.

Then, using the term applied by Stalin to those cherishing warlike aims against the Soviet Union, he added:

"If those swines' noses compel our industry to mobilize in order to arm our Red troops I think we will do it with more strength and more successfully than we have ever done anything before."

London, Feb. 1 (INS)—Possibility of a Russo-Japanese pact settling the outstanding differences between Moscow and Tokyo was reported here today.

The Daily Telegraph in a Dairen dispatch said signing of such an agreement "would not be a surprise to well-informed persons."

Japanese circles in Dairen do not regard seriously Russian "alarmist" statements of an impending war, declaring they merely are a camouflage to deceive other nations.

MRS. HIGGINSON BARES CRUELTY CHARGE IN DIVORCE SUIT

Allowance for Support Is Sought by "Amethyst Bride"

The wedding march of Betty Bird Higginson and Henry Lee Higginson ended in a crash of discord, "on or about April 4" of last year, the divorce petition filed in Middlesex court revealed today.

Mrs. Higginson alleges cruel and abusive treatment at that time and on other occasions. She asks for custody of her six-year-old child, Cecile Agassiz Higginson, and for an allowance for support of the child and herself.

Her residence is now in Brookline, the petitioner stated. That of Higginson is in Lincoln. Donald E. Mayberry and Walter F. Levis are Mrs. Higginson's attorneys.

FRIENDS EXPECTED SUIT

The couple have been separated for some time and friends in social circles have been expecting filing of the suit for some time.

The first legal move came [illegible] yesterday when it was admitted by Atty. Richard C. Evarts, counsel for Higginson, that his client had accepted service on the sheriff's writ.

Atty. Evarts would not say whether the divorce action would be contested when it comes up for hearing in court.

Mrs. Higginson is the daughter of Mrs. Lindsey E. Bird, of Brookline and Winchester, and at the time of her wedding was known as the "Amethyst Bride," due to her wearing an amethyst cross, which had been willed to her by Higginson's grandfather, patron of the arts and founder of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Their wedding in 1926 was one of the most brilliant social events of that season. Soon after the wedding, Mrs. Higginson had an important role in "Cavalleria Rusticana," when that opera was staged by the National Grand Opera Company at Boston Opera House.

Although impressive, she did not follow an operatic career.

WAX HAND TEST TRIPS SUSPECT IN SHOOTING

Science Wins Confession When It Proves Man Fired Revolver

Down in Providence yesterday a wax hand pointed an accusing trigger finger at a suspect in a shooting—and a confession was the result.

Crime—ever seeking new means to its nefarious ends—marches on. But science moves faster, closing the gap that is the criminal's loophole between doubtful innocense and unquestionable guilt.

Lucien F. Monteiro, of Bristol, R. I., was arrested charged with attempting to kill Antone Fragosa of Fall River, by firing a revolver into his car. He denied it and would not break under grilling.

So they gave him the nitrate test, explained by L. P. Charter, chief chemist of the Massachusetts state police, as science's modern adaptation for the detection of crime of an old test for nitrates.

Warm wax was poured on Monteiro's hand, gauze was laid over the wax, then another coating of wax. When the impression cooled liquid known as Lunge-s reagent was poured on the concave side and a thin blue line appeared around the wax shape of the trigger finger—proof of the presence of nitrate there. Monteiro confessed.

The Massachusetts state police are using this test, Charter revealed. If it is positive it is proof beyond reasonable doubt that the suspect has fired a revolver or automatic pistol within 36 hours.

"You see," Charter explained, "when any pistol or revolver is fired, the opening by the trigger allows a certain amount of residue to escape and remain on the finger. This is the nitrate from the powder in the shell. By applying a coat of warm wax, treated with sulphuric acid and diphenylamine crystals, to the trigger finger, we can bring out a blue line around the finger in the event that the man has done the shooting."

Defeated by Science

COURT SESSION IN AMBULANCE JAILS WOMAN

Defendant's Spine Is Not Healed, So Judge Acts

Her fractured spine not yet healed, Miss Edith Jameson, 50, clerk and director of the Shawmut Co-Operative Bank of Dorchester, was carried into Charles st. jail incased in a plaster cast today after being arraigned in an ambulance in the garage under the courthouse on charges of larceny.

Bail was set at $20,000 at the strange session at which the accused woman pleaded not guilty.

She could not provide the bail and was remanded to the jail by Judge Richard M. Walsh until Feb. 15, when the charges will be heard.

SHORTAGE IS $12,000

Miss Jameson suffered two fractured vertebrae in a fall from a window of her home on Dec. 28, before the alleged peculations became known, and she has been a hospital patient since.

State bank examiners found a shortage of about $12,000 in Miss Jameson's accounts but arraignment was on only two charges. Bond on 52 counts are held in escrow.

With all the formality of a regular session, Judge Walsh, Clerk Frederick E. Simmons, Court Officer Joseph Halligan and Probation Officer Scott Rose gathered in the garage.

BAIL SET AT $20,000

Already there were Inspectors John Dorsey and Edward Keating. Daniel J. Gallagher, prominent lawyer and president of the bank, and another attorney who represented Miss Jameson.

A side door of the ambulance was opened and steps leading to the interior were placed in position. Clerk Simmons mounted the stairs, leaned inside and read the first complaint, charging three counts of larceny of $10, $73 and $4.39.

U. S. ANTHEM TO BE EXHIBITED

Baltimore, Feb. 1 (AP)—Mounted on a red velvet covered wall, the original manuscript of the National Anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner, will be on display in the Walters Art Gallery tomorrow for the first time.

Francis Scott Key's masterpiece, recently purchased for $24,000 following an auction in New York, will be flanked by an American flag on one side and the Maryland flag on the other. Nearby will be a picture of Key by a contemporary artist and a printed copy of the anthem.

'Kingfish' Is in for Beating From Mayor

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—Senator Huey P. Long, who figured prominently in the battle of Sands Point and in "The Famous Case of the Cartridge Calling Card," today had another pursuer desiring to engage him in physical combat.

A bit of an atmosphere prevailed in the lobby of the fashionable Hotel Mayflower here. It stood as a possible battleground, since both principals reside at the hostelry.

Said six-foot Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans:

"I don't intend to place myself in the position of a mayor lying in wait for a Senator, but if I see Long I'm going to beat him up."

SENATOR LONG

Who admits he hopes Mayor Walmsley does not beat him up.

MAYOR WALMSLEY

Who craves Kingfish's scalp, won war medals that Rene Coste pinned on him.

Said Senator Long, self-styled "Louisiana Kingfish":

"Well, here's hoping he doesn't run into me."

Long was speaking in his room on the fourth floor of the hotel. Walmsley's words were delivered in his quarters on the ninth floor. The newly-elected mayor added:

"Well, I deliberately stopped in the same hotel that he occupies. He has a reputation for staying in his room here—but I may run into him in the lobby."

The two prominent figures in Louisiana's turbulent political arena have clashed verbally more than once in the past. Long has said he wanted Walmsley recalled from his mayoralty post. Walmsley has served notice he would break Long's political organization if possible.

No bookmakers quoted any odds this morning on a possible physical clash between the two, but friends of both men readily conceded Walmsley supporters would have to take the short end.

The New Orleans mayor would weigh in at better than two hundred pounds, and as a several letter man and football star at Tulane University, The Louisiana Senator is considerably lighter, although far from a lightweight, and as a youth went in more for scholastic than athletic pursuits.

Walmsley made clear that he had not come to Washington particularly to see Long, although he recalled a statement in New Orleans that if the Senator did not retract certain of his words he, Walmsley, would "go to Washington and make him swallow them."

RETAIL SALES SHOW GAIN OF 21 PER CENT

State Survey Reveals Upturn for First Half of January

Gains in retail sales of 21 per cent for the first half of January, as compared with the same period in 1933, are announced today by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, as the result of a survey covering 605 Massachusetts retail business houses. The report said:

"A special sales survey covering 300 Massachusetts retail concerns of all types revealed a gain of 2.7 per cent in dollar sales in December, 1933, over December, 1932. Of the 300 reporting concerns, 423 reported an increase and 322 a decline, while 55 reported approximately the same volume of sales in each month.

"The aggregate sales for December, 1933, amounted to over $26,000,000.

"Although the daily average value of new residential building declined 35.9 per cent in December, as compared with November, increases of 57.8 and 56.5 per cent, respectively, were recorded in the daily average of non-residential building and public works and utilities construction.

"According to the Massachusetts Department of Labor and Industries, employment in manufacturing establishments in the state declined more than 8 per cent between November and December, and a similar reduction occurred this period in aggregate payrolls. No change took place in the average weekly earnings per person employed in manufacturing establishments."

MILTON BREAKS LAID TO BOYS

Three boys, arrested in Hyde Park by Special Officer James J. Dalton, of the Milton police department, were arraigned in Quincy court today on seven charges of breaking and entering and larceny of automobiles.

The boys are said to have jimmied garage doors and taken cars for joy rides until they wrecked a machine on Sunday and one of them was hurt. Their case was continued until Saturday, juvenile day in Quincy court.

According to Dalton, one of the boys admitted that he held up a store in Boston

Divorce Ahead

COUPLE DIE IN SUICIDE PACT

Austin, Tex., Feb. 1 (AP)—Dr. Claude Mattingly, prominent Austin physician, and Mrs. F. A. C. Perrin, wife of a University of Texas professor, were found dead in a room of the Texan Hotel here today.

GAS JET OPEN; WOMAN DIES

Mrs. Bridget Connolly, 70, of 280 Gold st., South Boston, was found on the floor of her gas-filled kitchen this morning by a neighbor. She was pronounced dead after firemen from Ladder 5 tried for an hour to revive her with an inhalator.

The tragedy was discovered by George Hanlon, who lives in the flat beneath that of Mrs. Connolly. He woke up with, he said, he smelled gas and traced it to her door.

Breaking into the apartment, he found a jet on the side of the wall open. Apparently a tube leading to a plate had been detached by accident.

POLITICAL JOKE RACES FOUGHT

Elimination of "joker candidates" who run for office so their friends can bet on how few votes they will receive is sought in a bill given a public hearing today before the legislative committee on cities.

Mayor Lawrence A. Sagley and Rep. William H. Melley, bitter political foes, joined forces in advocating the bill, introduced by Rep. Paul J. McDonald, of Chelsea.

Under the present law only 25 signatures are required on nominating petitions. The bill calls for 250 signers of mayoralty petitions, 250 for aldermen-at-large and 50 for ward aldermen and school committee candidates.

"This bill will stop the clowning that has featured elections," said James F. Shannon, head of Chelsea aldermen. "Three of the candidates for mayor last year are now working on CWA projects and other candidates are on the welfare relief lists."

10-CENT MILK DUE TOMORROW FOR BOSTON

Milk and cream prices will be cut in the Boston area tomorrow morning. Cream will be 13 cents a pt. Milk will probably be down to 10 cents a quart "over the counter."

This was definitely established today, although official announcement will not come until tonight.

The delay in promulgating the price of milk is due to the narrow percentage of profit in handling and necessity of fixing that margin so that all retailers, including the small grocer, may not have to sell at a loss.

Some chain stores, being in the position of wholesalers and retailers at the same time, can sell at 10 cents. But leaders in the fight for lower prices say that they must establish the price at which the small grocer can sell under the NRA code signed by all retailers.

The margin of profit required for the small dealer will be established today. Then the distributors' prices will be set, for both independent and chain stores.

Selling cream prices is an easier matter because there is a wider margin in handling it.

Henceforth under the AAA milk marketing agreement only the price the distributor pays the producer will be fixed by the "milk formula." The margin of profit, will be set by the NRA.

Mystery Man's Body Found on Beach

Providence R. I., Feb. 1 (AP)—State police were asked this morning to investigate at once the death of an unidentified man whose body was washed upon the sands near the Quonochontaug coast guard station, and in whose pockets were found one of a pair of dice, a wine glass and a quantity of coins.

Dr. Francis Kenyon, medical examiner, declared that the presence of two gashes about an inch long on the hand led her to suspect foul play.

A ticket in the man's clothing also bore the stamp of the Colonial Navigation Co.

Trousers and one shoe were missing. In the overcoat pocket were several papers bearing the name of Wesley H. Fletcher.

New York, Feb. 1 (AP)—Officials of the Colonial Line said today that a passenger who gave the name of Wesley H. Fletcher was missing when the steamer Lexington arrived yesterday from Providence, R. I.

Norfolk Social Worker Job Open

A civil service examination for the position of psychiatric social worker, male, in the state prison colony at Norfolk, will be held at the State House March 9, the commission announced today. The last day for filing applications for the test is Feb. 23. The minimum salary is $1500 a year.

3 BLOWS FELL 3 TUFTS BOYS

Three punches by a Somerville policeman were sufficient to knock out three Tufts College students, by the students' own admission today, and they declare they have complained against the brawling officer in an attempt to obtain justice.

Just where they have compained, however, is a mystery to Police Chief Thomas Damery, because he has not had the matter brought to his attention, he said.

Chief Damery did declare that he had received complaints from residents of streets leading from Teele sq., Somerville, to Tufts College just over the line in Medford, that Tufts students were singing and carousing in these streets after midnight and that he had instructed his officers to stop it.

The complaining youths are Theodore Packard, 22, of Dean Hall; Horace Hollister, 21, 13 Sawyer ave, Somerville, and Ralph Kahar, 22, of Fletcher Hall. All bear marks of the brawl.

According to the youths they were on their way to a fraternity house on Packard ave. Sunday night when they passed a parked auto occupied by a woman and her escort. The trio declared the man passed a remark about the college song they were singing and when they resented it he leaped from the car and administered a beating to all three.

NEW TAX STIRS COPRA TRADE

San Francisco, Feb. 1—Deluged with protests from all sections of the United States and from the Philippine Islands, the House Ways and Means Committee took a proposed five-cents-per pound excise tax under reconsideration today, according to word received here.

The committee's approval of the proposed tax aroused a storm of objection on grounds that it would destroy the copra and oil and domestic industry in the nation and seriously cripple shipping.

San Francisco and the bay region, with extensive interests involved, is actively engaged in the fight to prevent the ruinous tax from becoming law.

The tax, industrial leaders pointed out in telegrams to Washington, would throw thousands out of work by closing down bay region soap factories and copra crushing plants, and by cutting off entirely the imports of copra that make up 15 per cent of the port's incoming tonnage.

Pointing out that the price of cocoanut oil locally is 2¾ cents per pound, leaders of industry declared the proposed tax amounts to 200 per cent, and actually a protective tariff for foreign-made soap.

$5000 or Death

Ann Pennington, original "million dollar legs" girl of stage fame, has been threatened with death if she tells police of an extortion note

PENNINGTON GETS THREAT

Pittsburgh, Feb. 1 (INS)—A crude note demanding $5000 under threat of death from Ann Pennington, stage star, caused postal authorities to launch an investigation and search for its author today.

Bearing the signature "ZX," the extortion demand written on a poor grade of paper said:

"Ann Pennington—we want $5000 by Monday. We will tell you where to put it. Do not call the police if you do not want to die."

SPLIT BILLS ON TAXES URGED

Tax Commr. Henry F. Long today before the legislative committee on taxation, registered opposition to a bill to permit property owners whose titles are in possession of a municipality for tax arrears, to redeem those titles through partial payment of the taxes.

On behalf of the Massachusetts Real Estate Owners Asso., Edward L. Schonberg said that city and town collectors have refused installments on back taxes offered by home owners because here is no provision for partial payments.

Mrs. Hannah Connors claimed hundreds of Boston home owners would be able to redeem their property.

LOOMIS ORDER IRKS SALESMEN

Salesmen who solicit orders from the city were on the warpath today as the result of an order posted this morning by Warren W. Loomis of Needham, the new superintendent of supplies.

The edict admits them to his office only on Wednesdays and Thursdays, between 10 a. m. and noon. And it requires them to wait in line for a chance to display their wares or solicit his patronage.

They are particularly perturbed because, they say, the new system makes it impossible for them to see Loomis to obtain additional information about specifications when the city advertises for bids.

Many bids, they say, are asked on short notice, and only incomplete specifications are given. Unless given a chance to ask questions, the salesmen said, bids must be submitted on guesswork.

And a few of the men were very much on their dignity: the thought of sitting in a "bread line" for a chance to sell the city a bill of goods was abhorrent to them.

Ooctor Is Guilty in Surgery Case

Dr. Percy W. Carr of 1138 River st., Hyde Park, a practising physician for 30 years, was found guilty today in Suffolk superior court of a charge of illegal surgery. At the same time, Ina M. Pluda of West Roxbury was convicted of being an accessory after the fact.

Disposition was continued until Feb. 19 at the request of Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, after counsel filed a motion for a new trial on the charge against the woman.

School Strike at Salem Is Halted

All was quiet along the Salem High School front today. But the students were not elated by that fact. They had looked forward to a strike today.

Two weeks ago the school board voted to extend the afternoon session time from 1:15 to 2 p. m. effective today. This action precipitated protests from parents and students. The latter issued an ultimatum that they would strike.

The issue was further complicated by complaints about the school lunchroom. The service was bad, the students asserted.

The school board gave heed to the protests against the new hours and announced that it would abide by the wishes of the parents.

But the students didn't get much of a kick out of their victory. It was too easy; too lacking in excitement.

Judge Ponders Woman's Charges

Judge Charles L. Carr today took under advisement the case of an alleged criminal assault upon Mrs. Mildred Guest, of Kilteredge st., Beverly, by John J. Walsh, of Cumberland st., South End.

Mrs. Guest said she was in a Boston theater when Walsh suddenly placed a gun at her side, ordered her to leave with him, forced her into a car and took her to his room.

Walsh told the court he picked Mrs. Guest up in the theater. He said that she accompanied him, on a street car. He denied the assault charge.

BOY, 20, FACES DEATH GRILL

Although no evidence has been obtained linking Charles T. Jones, Roxbury youth, with the South End bakery slaying of Ethel Zuckerman, police believe he was the writer of a score of threat letters.

Jones, who lives at 84 Dudley st., and is 20 years old, was in the lineup at headquarters today, while experts checked his handwriting with that on numerous poison pen notes.

Taken to headquarters by his father in accordance with an arrangement, young Jones was grilled for hours concerning his movements the night the girl was slain in the Harrison ave., bakery.

He also was questioned concerning several letters including that sent to the parents of Lorraine A. Hewey, 18, of 24 Freeman st., Dorchester, shortly before she reappeared at her home after an unexplained absence.

"I killed Ethel Zuckerman," the letter stated. "Watch for my next victim."

Other letters police are inclined to ascribe to Jones were those written to Louis Rudnick of Newton, threatening to kidnap his children, and to Mary Pickford, movie star when she was in Boston.

NEW CWA BUYER SEEN AS MOVE ON LAXITY

The appointment of E. F. Tomlinson as purchasing agent of CWA supplies in Boston, as exclusively announced in the Boston Evening American on Tuesday, was fraught with deep significance, according to disclosures today.

It followed rumors from City Hall and CWA headquarters in Young's Hotel, relative to alleged laxity in buying supplies for 09 projects in this city, employing more than 17,000 men and women.

Tomlinson has made quite a reputation in the federal service. He had charge of all supplies on the Hogg Island projec..

LOOMIS AVOIDS ISSUE

There were charges of alleged favoritism in placing orders, failure to demand competitive bidding, and payment of top prices for second and third-rate merchandise.

Charges of extravagance were so general when Mayor Mansfield appointed Warren W. Loomis, of Needham, city purchasing agent, that the latter immediately requested the state CWA authorities to appoint a purchasing agent for state CWA supply headquarters in Boston.

Loomis' predecessor, Phillip Chapman, had been given the job by the state CWA board in conjunction with his duties as purchasing agent for the city. Loomis chose to sidestep the extra authority.

SALESMEN CRITICAL

The first rumblings about CWA supplies bought for Boston projects came from salesmen who charged they found "conditions far better at state C W A supply headquarters than they did at City Hall.

Salesmen who were loud in their criticism of city practices claimed all got a break at state headquarters where only the lowest bidder has a chance under rules from Washington. Economy is the rule at the office of Col. H. L. Morse, a former regular army officer who served in the Philippines and overseas.

Col. Morse declined today to discuss rumors relative to CWA supplies bought for City of Boston projects.

Shorty's Loon Walks on Frozen Steam

Gloucester, Feb. 1—"Shorty" Hanson—you remember the little guy whose cross-eyed cat was swallowed by the sea turtle some time back while Shorty was trawling down off of Stellwagen banks?—swung the nose of his cabin cruiser smack against the lee quarter of the Gertrude L. Thebaud as she lay at Ben Pine's wharf today, slipped a hawser around a frozen piling and stepped to the wharf.

Shorty's breath came in short gasps and from those short gasps there oozed a string of "downeast cuss words" that made Capt. Archie McLeod turn crimson with shame, for some of Archie's gang were bad enough like that when fishing was poor, but Shorty's was even better.

"What's the matter, Shorty?" asked the reporter as he covered his near frostbitten ears. "More trouble?"

"Don't want to talk to you," Shorty replied. "You got me in more fathoms of mud with that story 'bout my cross-eyed cat than I ever heaved a sounding lead into."

And again Shorty swore.

Coaxing, pleading, mockery being of no avail, the reporter decided the only way to thaw Shorty out was a stiff, hot Tom and Jerry, so after that had gone down the hatch, Shorty unbuttoned his now softened oilskins, lit a tattered cigar butt, and told the story.

Since Shorty lost his cross-eyed cat which mistook the open mouth of a large sea turtle for a rat hole, Shorty has acquired another mascot, in the form of a tame loon he picked up crippled in one leg down off Thatcher's a bit some three months ago.

Everywhere Shorty goes, the loon goes too, sometimes flying ahead of the little trawler, but mostly perched on the rail where he folds his head beneath one wing and sleeps until Shorty begins to dress the catch—for dressing the catch means dinner for the loon, and that's one thing no loon will pass up.

"Well," says Shorty, "you know it's been cold ashore here the past two days ain't it? But not near as cold as it's been out to the eastard. I always carry a thermometer with me, see," and Shorty displayed a small glass tube with a mercury bottom.

"This glass she dropped clear out of sight—way down so's you couldn't think anything else but what the mercury froze in the bottom and—"

"That's a clinical thermometer, Shorty, one of those things the doctors stick in your mouth. You can't tell the temperature by that."

"Taint no sich thing; don't don't you see the numbers? Well, anyway, my loon was sitting on the rail and the vapor was so thick that time we couldn't see each other and the only clear space was aft where my exhaust steam was sizzling out astern."

WHO'S LOONY NOW?

"I got kinda busy cleaning the fish and didn't pay much attention to the loon until I was abreast of Thatcher's and then I missed the son-of-a-gun. I looked around a bit, and by the old topsail halyards, there was that damn loon suspended in the air and walking along like nobody's business. You might not believe it, but as fast as my exhaust steam hit the cold air it froze solid and the loon was walking along it to kind of warm his frozen feet.

"All the way from Thatcher's clear into Ten-Pound island the son-of-a-gun walked on frozen steam, and as I slowed her up a bit and cut the motor to shoot her over to Ken Tarr's to take out the trip, I left a gap in the steam line and the darn loon, his feet caught in the ice, couldn't move, and I had to turn about and go back for him."

"That's the proper thing to do, Shorty; be kind to dumb animale, you know," said the reporter.

"Oh, yeah! Well, let me tell you something. When I spent all that time trying to get that loon chopped out of the frozen exhaust steam the market dropped a cent a pound on fish, and I had 4500 weight aboard."

"Whose the loon? Me or the —loon?"

SNOW IS HERE; STORM COMING

Some fluttering snowflakes, beginning to fall about noon, backed up the prediction of Uncle Sam's forecaster that there would be "a storm" today. The only trouble for Mr. Average Citizen was to determine what kind of a storm there would be by nightfall.

The snow storm arrived from Ontario. If ian't joined by the rain that is blowing up from the Gulf Statees, there will be snow. If there is a merger of the storm areas the bets are on rain.

Saugus Solon Protests Fare Increase

Acting on behalf of hundreds of constituents who are leading a fight against the proposed increase in fares on the Narrow Gauge Railway, Rep. Tony A. Garofano, of Saugus, today addressed a letter of protest against the project to the Public Utilities Commission.

Declaring the increase, if permitted, would seriously affect thousands of workers as well as students of Greater Lynn who attend schools in and near Boston, Rep. Garofano branded officials of the railroads as men who beg for fare increases with "crocodile tears."

HISTORIAN SEES PEACE NOTE IN WAR PHOTOS

Albert Bushnell Hart, author, historian and professor emeritus at Harvard, thinks Floyd Gibbons' World War photographs, printed each week in the Boston Sunday American, are the best sort of history pictorialized.

They are anti-war propaganda and preparedness propaganda.

He believes in peace but with preparedness. He said:

"These Gibbons pictures are most unusual, to say the least. Frightful, possibly, but war is frightful. It is getting worse. The next war will be the worst in history, if it comes, and I think it will come.

"My horror of war does not prevent me from realizing its seeming inevitability, human nature being as crass as it is. I have little faith in international agreements not to use certain weapons.

"War makes hangmen of soldiers. And I'm not the conventional type of pacifist.

"I am a realist. Like Gibbons. The last war was horrible. The next will be hideous.

"And I see no way of averting it. If I could!"

WIFE'S ACT MAY JAIL HUBBY

A bitter legal battle is expected in Suffolk superior court when the appeal of Neil Withers, 36, of Washburn ave., Revere, from a $1,1 sentence of nine months for an assault allegedly committed by his wife, comes up for trial.

Sentence was imposed on Withers in Chelsea District Court yesterday by Judge Samuel R. Cutler on a seldom-invoked theory of law that a husband may be held responsible for acts of his wife unless he makes some move to halt her.

Revere police made no charges of any kind against the wife, Mrs. Olive Withers, although in their testimony they named her as the actual assailant.

Police claim the assault occurred as a result of a party at the Fitzgerald in which Mrs. Withers became offended at some remarks allegedly made about her.

Tide, Harnessed by Engineers -:- Made to Move Bridge

Here's how they made the tide do the heavy work on the Fore River today. The job was that of lifting a drawbridge—weight 600 tons—and moving it a distance of 400 feet. Then, as the tide went into low, the draw was hooked on to the new temporary span. Now they'll tear down the old spans, build new ones, and make the tide move the draw all over again on lighters.

'Take Silver,' He Warns N. E.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, a native of Massachusetts, who today in Boston warned New England manufacturers that if they hope to reclaim the markets of the world they must accept the remonetization of silver. In an enlightening interview with John T. Lambert he praised President Roosevelt and Father Coughlin. (Boston American photo.)

Old Man Tide Wins Task of Shifting Fore River Draw

Three months of figuring by engineers are receiving their reward today with the 600-ton draw of the Fore River bridge, resting on two huge scows, moving slowly upstream with the incoming tide to a point 400 feet above its original site.

It is expected the draw will settle into position on its new supports late today. It will be opened in some five days and will carry South Shore traffic for the next two years while the new $2,5000,000 Fore River bridge is being constructed.

Work on the engineering feat got under way at low tide at 6:04 a. m. At 7:04 a. m. the tide had caused the scows to rise and lift the draw from its resting place. They will then be allowed to move upstream with the incoming tide to the temporary bridge site.

At 12:15 p. m. high tide was reached and the scows started to sink as the tide ebbed.

In the crowd of 1500 that watched the enginering feat this morning were Mayor Charles A. Ross, of Quincy; William L. Foster, chairman of the Hingham selectmen, and Warren A. Connell, trustees for the old bridge, and their jobs automatically expired when it was moved. They will have no authority over the new span, or even over the old one so long as it is used as a temporary affair.

LACK OF MOTIVE HALTS ARSENIC DEATH ARREST

A ruthless, wholesale poisoner of the Borgia type, with knowledge of chemistry, was sought today for the murder of three Walpole men.

The victims died after a drinking bout a week ago Sunday, deliberately poisoned with arsenic, according to Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing of Norfolk County.

He revealed that a woman and a man are under suspicion and indictments for the murders may be made following the inquest in Dedham District Court.

The coroner, authorities state, had been sufficiently familiar with chemistry to shield the arsenic with an alkaline before injecting it into the liquor the men drank. If the alkaline had not been used the liquor would have become smoky.

The dead men were Andrew Olson, 43, farm hand; Peter Bozwadaus, 35, tanner, and Alexander Romaszkowski, 51, farm hand. Albert Steinberg, 45, farm foreman, who also drank the deadly brew, is alive because he became suspicious of wood alcohol before consuming much of the liquor, and drank coffee, a partial antidote, immediately afterward.

What jealousies or feuds were responsible for the Walpole tragedy, have yet to be learned. The search for evidence is in the hands of State Detective Michael Fleming and Police Chiefs Levi S. Thompson of Walpole, and William H. Sullivan of Norwood.

Mrs. Wilhemina Sauer, 38, and her daughter, Irma, 18, at whose farmhouse on North st., Walpole, the fatal drinking party took place, were questioned.

CHILD CUSTODY UP TO JUDGE

Ending a suit in which bitter charges and tears were equally in evidence and in which a mother and grandmother fought for the custody of 10-year-old Catherine V. Ford, Judge Arthur E. Beane of the Middlesex Probate Court today had taken the case under advisement.

The legal battle, which lasted several days, ended last night following arguments of attorneys for Mrs. Catherine C. Ford, the mother, and Mrs. Nora L. Keefe, the paternal grandmother of the little girl.

Charging Mrs. Ford with being a unfit person to have custody of her own child, the grandmother, through counsel, sought to paint the mother as a habitue of speakeasies and a woman with a large number of "boy friends." This testimony was supported by the child who told the court of visiting a place where "mother went in sober and came out drunk."

Mrs. Ford, tears streaming from her eyes, denied the allegations and called 20 character witnesses who testified that, to their certain knowledge, the mother did not drink or smoke and had always been a "good and conscientious mother."

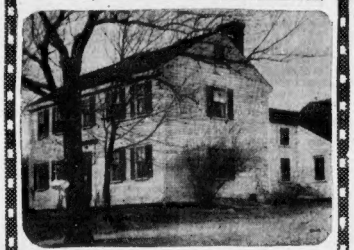
YD ANNUAL BALL FRIDAY NIGHT

American Legion Post, 290, veterans of the 26th Division, will stage their annual ball at Hotel Bradford, Friday night. J. H. Dunphy is the chairman of a large committee comprising Phil Sorgi, A. J. Purdon, treasurer; Al Barnard, secretary, and the executive officers of the post.

Prominent military officers as well as state and city dignitaries will attend. Members of the auxiliary and the various Suffolk County auxiliaries are planning a gala get-together. Refreshments will be served. Tickets may be obtained at the YD Club on Huntington ave. or at Hotel Bradford.

Arsenic Inquest Awaited

Police Chief Levi Thompson, of Walpole, seated at his desk, discusses with Patrolman William Hennessey the murder of three men who drank "moonshine" liquor mixed with arsenic. The bottles will be exhibits at the inquest today. The victims were Peter Bozwadaus, Andrew Olson and Alex Romaszkowski.



The Christopher Saur farm house, Fisher rd., near Walpole, was the scene of the fatal drinking bout Jan. 21. Mary and Steve Baron, Weld ave., Norwood, have been arraigned in connection with the case on a charge of selling liquor containing wood alcohol. Other arrests have been promised.

One of the chief witnesses in the case is Irma Sauer, 18. She said she was driving from Walpole to Norwood in an auto when the men stopped her and asked her to take them to Norwood to buy liquor. She said she did as they requested and that the Barons sold the liquor. The party then returned to the Saur farm, where the three victims made their home and where two of them were employed as laborers. (Boston American photo.)

Suckers, Romance Undo 'Colonel'

Vermont Girl Companion Not Wife, but He Loves Her

His romance is blasted with the girl of his heart, "Colonel" Walter Lee Wimberly, 40, of Kentucky, suh, told police detectives at a headquarters showup today.

A bit seedy at the elbows and run down at the heels—honest poverty, suh, as becomes a Kentucky gentleman—the colonel indignantly denied he was a race track tout who holds, in off seasons, an illegal whispered converse with telephone booth coin boxes the while doing things to them, with string or thread, which cause the phone company to lose money.

The colonel and his little girl friend, June Skinner, pretty and 21, and recently down from the Royalton (Vt.) countryside, were arrested yesterday and she was in Roxbury court today while the gentleman from the blue grass was giving Capt. James Daley, supervisor of cases, a run for his money at the showup.

Between Capt. Daley and the colonel, the questions and answers went as follows:

Q.—How did you happen to come to Boston. A.—I heard there are a lot of suckers here.

HAS A SWEETHEART

Q.—You mean you advise race horses? A.—A racehorse adviser is a legal turf advisor.

Q.—You mean you advise legal turf? A.—I mean I advise suckers how to place their money on the ponies.

JUNE SKINNER

Kentuckian Is Here to Trim Unwary Race Bettors

Q.—Have you a sweetheart? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then she's not your wife? A.—Well, not on paper. But she is the girl of my heart and I love her.

GUILT IS DENIED

Q.—Are you interested in phone company shares? A.—No.

Q.—You're charged with tampering with telephone coin boxes. A.—Not guilty, judge. Why should I be tampering with them. I've spent $165,000 in phone calls all over the country in the last five years.

Q.—Ever arrested before? A.—Four times.

Q.—Served time? A.—Last night was the longest I was ever held.

Q.—You're a race track tout who goes all over the country? A.—I'm not a tout but I go all over the country.

Q.—Don't you use string or thread and loop it and jiggle it in telephone slots for illegal purposes? A.—I don't know what you're talking about.

They held him for further investigation. He met June at Rockingham at the last meet and she has been writing home about her husband.

DEATH THREATS TOLD IN REVERE KILLING TRIAL

Four government witnesses were threatened with death if they dared identify Nicholas Porazzo as one of the gunmen who invaded the Maiden Social and Athletic Club, Revere, a year ago New Year's morning and wounded Walter Shea and killed "Big Mike" Richardi, according to testimony offered by the state today in the trial of Porazzo on a first degree murder charge.

The story of this intimidation was told on the stand by Luigi Richardi of Granite st., South Braintree, a brother of the slain man.

When Asst. Dist. Atty. Daniel Gillen first sought to bring out the story he was halted by defense objections that were upheld by Judge Gill. After the morning recess, however, he returned with an armful of citations and the court reversed itself.

Luigi, when recalled to the stand, said that four government witnesses told him they had failed to identify Porazzo in Chelsea district court as one of the gunners because they "were afraid they'd get shot."

The four were: Daniel Richardi, a son of the slain night club proprietors; Donato Richardi and Nicholas Fabiano, also relatives, and Dominick Aiello. All have taken the stand during the present trial to say that Porazzo was in the group that invaded the place.

Faya 'Wreck' on $100 a Week

only to break the agreement under which Rudy is now paying her $100 a week.

The motion was originally made before Justice McGeehan, who referred it back to Justice Lydon. For the latter to grant it would be to reverse himself.

Fay, who wants to continue her California suit where they whack up marital litigants' property by splitting it down the middle, further claimed that she is too ill to return to New York and continue her suit. In substantiation of that she submitted affidavits from two physicians.

Hartstein, who also prefers the California law courts, stated that Rudy is trying to create public sympathy for himself in New York, that his methods are "nauseating and degrading," that the court can rest assured that they will be "exposed at the proper time" and that Buehel once represented both Rudy and Fay and ought to cut down on his motions, affidavits and charges.

Rudy claimed that when Fay returned to California last September she was constantly going to "gay parties" and didn't live with her parents until he reminded her that that was her supposed reason for the trip. He also pointed out that during the "short period" of their married life she practically lived in a Pullman car, making six round trips and expressed great doubt that she is now unable to return to New York and fight it out on his home grounds.

COLDS

Go Thru 3 Stages

—and They're Far Easier Relieved in the First than in the Second or Third!

A cold ordinarily goes through 3 stages: the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. The first stage is the time to "nail" a cold.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is the treatment for colds. It is expressly a cold remedy and not a preparation good for half a dozen other things as well. It is direct and internal which is what a cold, an internal infection, requires. It is also complete—it does the four things necessary, it opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is inviting trouble. Get Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine at any druggist. 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and refuse a substitute.

Distinguished Audience at Musicale

THE BOSTON MORNING MUSICALE, Mme. Marie Jeritza and M. Albert Spalding, guest artists, brought out a large and notable assembly at the Statler yesterday morning.

Madame Jeritza won everyone's heart with her beauty and marvelous voice. . .she was gowned in black velvet with cowl scarf of silver cloth, her glorious blonde hair making her a radiant picture. . .we have not heard a better chosen program at the Musicale than Jeritza's and we revelled in her warm, expressive singing. . .

Mr. Spalding, also, seemed inspired and played with a warmth and fervor we have never heard excelled. . .the audience fell completely under his charm and called again and again for encores.

In the throng which gathered about the coffee tables preceding the concert we glimpsed Mrs. Robert Stevenson, Mrs. James M. Hunnewell and daughter Caroline in mink coats. . . genial Miss Rose Dexter in black caracul. . . Anne Warren in the warm red and brown tones. . . Mrs. Hamilton Osgood, Mrs. Philip Stockton in black with red vest. . . Mrs. William O. Taylor, Mrs. William E. Ladd, Mrs. William C. Cox, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., Miss Leonora Kimball, and many others. . .

MISS ASTRID RICE HEADS BLACK AND WHITE BALL COMMITTEE

DEBUTANTE BUSY WITH WEDDING PLANS

MISS JEAN FERGUSON, one of the season's fairest debs, is being feted at many social events as she makes plans for her wedding. The daughter of Mrs. Luther Mitchell Ferguson, who was graduated from the Beaver Country Day School last June, announced her engagement to Mr. John Brittain Bigelow, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Frank H. Bigelow, at the same time that she made her debut. (Boston American photo.)

Barbara Eaton Also Among Workers

MISS ASTRID RICE, general chairman of the junior committee formed to assist the work of the Hillside School for Boys together with Miss Barbara Eaton and other members of the committee, are busy making final plans for the Black and Blue Ball which they have planned for Saturday evening, Feb. 10, at the Copley-Plaza.

Twenty-four boys, headed by John J. Wilbor, will act as ushers on this occasion. Included among these are Carl Adams, Arthur Chace, Albert Nickerson, Franklin Reece, B. F. Ezhelman, Thomas Gannett, Thomas Knowles, Waters Kellogg, Jackson Turner, Lawrence Eaton, Marvins Gorham, Charles Weston, Gardner Barker, Wilton Burton, Charles Newton, Robert Nickerson, Richard Ames, William Prout, Benjamin Foss, John Rogers, Kenneth Brown, Charles Brown and James Gardiner.

Miss Eleanor King, chairman of the ticket committee, announces that she has received an unusually large request for tickets.

The Misses Margarst Blake, Carolyn Hunnewell, Amy Lang, Eleanor Shaw, Marion Wood, Louise McNeil, Frances Turner, Anne Upton, Barbara Taylor, Bettina Ezhelman, Betty Reece and Constance Turner are the other busy debutante members of the committee.

Sponsors for Recital

Mrs. Charles H. Lawrence, Mrs. Charles F. Mills, Mrs. Frances Appleton and Mrs. John Briggs Potter are among those who have made early reservations for the concert to be given by Albert Spalding and Ossip Gabrilowitsch on Saturday afternoon, February 17. The program is to be a sonata recital by these two famous artists in Jordan Hall.

Subscriptions have also been made by Mrs. M. Greene Haughton, Miss Doris Volland, Mrs. Joseph Sargent, Mrs. Isabel French, Mrs. John C. Rice, Mr. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., Miss Katherine French, Miss Olivia Simes, Mr. Philip Miner, Mrs. W. E. Cushing, Mrs. George Putnam, Mrs. Edward Bancroft and Miss M. R. Howland.

Long Is. Nurses to Give Comedy

The Long Island Hospital Nurses Training School, class of 1934, will present a comedy, "Easy Money," tonight and tomorrow night at the Curley Recreation Building, Long Island.

Miss Marion Carey and Miss Helen O'Neil will have the leading roles. The leading male roles will be taken by Tim Coakley and James Collins, training school employes. Paul and Billy McNamara, aged three and six years, will do a song and dance act.

Chatty Notes of Society

MAJ. AND MRS. ROBERT E. STONE of Brookline have opened their home on Lyttleton st., Camden, S. C., for the remainder of the season. They are accompanied by Mrs. Stone's brothers, J. A. Balderston and Wilson Balderston, of Brookline and Baltimore.

MISS MARGARET CONKLIN of Brookline is passing a mid-winter vacation at the Hobkirk Inn in Camden, S. C., where golf and quail hunting are claiming the attention of most of the guests.

NEW YORK IS THE TEMPORARY habitat of the Roger D. Hales of Chestnut Hill who are registered at the St. Regis Hotel for a few days prior to sailing to Europe.

MADAME LORETTA LAURENTI and Mr. Maxim Karolik will be the artists at the concert this evening in the beautiful Commonwealth ave. home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lyman. Miss Ruth Lyman, sub debutante daughter of the household, will assist with ushering and receiving the guests.

University Club Reelects Houston

Prof. Clarence P. Houston, of Tufts College, has been reelected president of the University Club, Stanley C. Lary, secretary, announced today.

New governors elected were Ralph T. Jope, advertising manager of Technology Review; John W. Cronin, and Karl D. Scates.

Fahrney Heiress Asks Annulment

Los Angeles, Feb. 1 (INS)—Merry Fahrney Pwllering Eiszner, patent medicine heiress, will seek an annulment of her marriage to Frank Eiszner, her attorney, Dr. Forrest Home, announced today.

They conferred last night on details of the projected action, which, if filed, will be on the grounds that she did not realize what she was doing when she married Eiszner at Aurora, Ill., in an elopement last November 10.

Proparvulis Club Committee Plans Gala Supper Dance

ALWAYS COLORFUL ARE the mid-winter parties of the Proparvulis Club and the supper dance slated for Feb. 12 in the main ballroom and foyer of the Copley-Plaza is expected to be bigger and better than ever. Surprises and gay plans are being whispered and we can expect almost anything from such an attractive and active committee.

Miss Helene Stout of Milton, vice-president of the club and chairman of reservations, has the co-operation of Miss Pauline L. Walker of Medford as chairman of the usher group who has for aides Miss Catherine Grant, Julia Grant, Doris Cahill, Mrs. Harvena Dillon, Mrs. Beatrice Howard, Mary Cahill, Cecilia Kirby, Esther Kirby, Eileen Guthrie, Casimir Devine, Marguerite Barry and Helen Lafferty.

Catherine Carroll

Miss Mary Goode is chairman of patronesses. Her committee comprises Mary Ryan, Katherine Rohan, Eva Flynn, Helen McGrath, Mary and Marie Dean, Mildred Fitzgerald, Sabina McArdle, Helen Foy, Sabina Barry, Ethel Ring, Norah Mullarkey, Helen O'Connor, Blanche Perry, Alice Mahon, Mary O'Brien and Ethel Burns.

MISS ALICE FITZPATRICK of Chestnut Hill, a former president of the Ace of Clubs, entertained at her home on Tuesday a group of members of the club who are actively interested in the supper dance which they plan to hold at the Hotel Somerset on Feb. 9. The proceeds of this dance will be devoted to the charities of the Ace of Clubs. Mrs. Francis T. Jantsen, the president, presided at the tea table.

Among those present were Mrs. William B. Burke, Miss Miriam Finegan, both of whom are past presidents of the club. Also in attendance were Miss Alice Boyden, Miss Kathleen Carney, Mrs. Joseph V. Carroll, Miss Theodora Day, Miss Florence Hurley, Miss M. Alice Hurley, Miss Katherine Manning, Miss Mary Webb McAnarney, Mrs. Raymond T. Stuart and Miss Helen Watson.

The next meeting of the Ace of Clubs will be held at the Hotel Somerset on Monday afternoon, Feb. 5. Mrs. Francis T. Jantzen will present as guest speaker Mr. John Claire Minot. Following the talk tea will be served, the pourers will be Mrs. Joseph V. Carroll and Mrs. Thomas J. O'Shea. They will be assisted by Miss Barbara Dowling, Miss Catherine Cronin, Miss Kathryn Glynn and Miss Miriam Maloney.

Wedding

A SURPRISE TO THE friends of Dr. and Mrs. Phillip McManus was the announcement yesterday of their marriage last week at St. Michael's Church in Brookline. The bride was the former Miss Betty Devlin of Brookline. She was attended by Miss Theresa Sheedy of Lawrence, and the bridegroom by his brother, Charles E. McManus, of the faculty of the Hudson high school.

Dr. McManus is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. McManus of Hudson, and graduated from Holy Cross and Tufts Medical School. He has been associated with hospitals in Boston, Brighton and Quincy.

Mrs. McManus is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy and St. Elizabeth's Training School for Nurses in Brighton.

Coffee Parties Cover City

Thursday again proves the exception on the schedule of coffee parties for the Emergency Campaign, since none were planned for this morning. Four, however, are taking place this afternoon, and at the first of these at 2 o'clock, the Harvard Woman's Club, meeting at the Hotel Vendome, hears Mrs. Robert J. Culbert tell what the campaign workers are hoping to achieve.

There are two meetings at 2:30, one at Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church on Gore st., Roxbury Crossing, and one at the Hotel Touraine, where Mrs. Nathaniel U. Walker acts as hostess for the Daughters of Colonial Wars, who are being addressed by Mrs. Robert C. Terry.

Bashka Paeff is pouring at the coffee the Hotel Gralyn is giving this evening, when about 30 young business women will meet at 8:30 to hear Miss Helene Boll tell about the campaign, while Mrs. Robert K. Johnson, wife of the proprietor, acts as hostess. The talk and films will be given in the dining room and guests will then adjourn to the parlor for refreshments.

Besides the guests of the hotel, among those planning to be present are Frank Hull, construction engineer of the new postoffice, Frederick Fiske, Joseph Jones, Joseph Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Henson, Ellsworth Abercrombie and his son, Ellsworth, Jr., Mrs. Esther Cunningham and her daughter, Miss Marie Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Jordan and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haley.

Miss Gertrude Peabody is the speaker for a large gathering from industry and business, meeting at the Y. W. C. A., 140 Clarendon st. at 7 o'clock and Mlle. Katherine A. Wells addresses a group of canvassers at the Roslindale home of Mrs. Roman Piekarski at 2 in the afternoon.

Men are in general so tricky, so envious and so cruel, that when we find one who is only weak, we are happy.—Voltaire

This Is Life

—By Robert E. Rogers—

I HAVE just been introduced to one of the most useful books I have read for a long time. Useful, that is, to anyone who is really interested to know whither we are drifting. As to our exact position in the drift, of course there is no end of speculation. Some of us are sure that the Constitution has been definitely laid on the shelf; others that we are all ripe for a new one. Some of us, of the Communist brand, insist that what is taking place is merely a new variety of European Fascism, which will result in freeing the business man from the fetters of the Sherman Act and allow him full freedom. Still others envisage the future as a Servile State, to quote from Mr. Hilaire Belloc, with us all under the collective thumb of the A. F. of L.

The gentleman I am concerned with is sure that the outcome will be a rigorous State Socialism (the same thing which others call State Capitalism). Furthermore, he insists that our arrival at the wharf of Socialism will not be an unexpected, sudden manoeuvre. We have accelerated our pace, of late, he admits, and are steaming full speed ahead for the new pier on the left bank, leaving old Pier Constitution far behind on the right. These beautiful and touching figures of speech are mine, I may say, not his.

Knows His Stuff

"HE" is a barrister of South Carolina, where the Constitution has always been upheld in awed respect. Indeed, they claim down there that such awed respect was the real cause of the Civil War. We-uns up No'th dis-respected it, so they-uns down South had to fight to protect it. Anyway, Mr. Henry Savage, Jr., knows his stuff. His book is called "America Goes Socialistic" (Dorrance & Co., Phila.) and it is as neat and factual and persuasive a little handbook of figures and ideas as I have met up with for a long time. A genuine mine of data for editors, politicians, and publicists in general.

In the front is a little chart showing the governmental drift toward Socialism (away from the old constitutional individualism) since 1790. The line shows that from 1790 to 1890 our government had progressed about 20 per cent toward Socialism in a hundred years. But during the next 40 years, from 1890 to 1930, we had reached the 70 per cent point, an increase of over twice as much in less than half the time. His chart ends with the inauguration of Mr. Roosevelt. It would take no crystal ball gazer to guess that if Mr. Savage had prolonged his chart another three years there would be another big jump.

His point is that the steady pressure of mass opinion has forced our government steadily toward the left, and to take on characteristics originally foreign to it and, when taken together, obviously socialistic.

The Innovations

"AMONG the more pregnant of these socialistic innovations are: (1) a vast system of free public benefits; (2) government ownership of business enterprises; (3) an extensive system of regulation of private business; (4) a bureaucratic government largely beyond the control of the electorate; (5 taxation that amounts to the requisition of a large portion of the national income; (6) a system of disproportionate taxation of the rich for the benefit of the masses; (7) extensive abridgment of the sanctity of private property; (8 laws especially favoring the lower classes in the economic scale, and (9) a rising system of provisions to secure economic security for all.

Thus generalized, nearly everybody would agree to the truth of this. Then to be specific, he gives Eugene V. Debs's Socialistic platform in 1912: Federal loans to states, public works to relieve unemployment, government employment bureaus, shorter work days and weeks, old age pensions, health insurance, workmen's compensation laws, abolition of child labor and interstate shipment of convict labor products, minimum wage laws, graduated income taxes, high inheritance taxes, free education, equal suffrage, direct election of the President, initiative, referendum and recall, and abolition of the injunction in labor disputes.

Sees Socialism Here

"THAT, mind you, was back in 1912. Is Socialism coming? Asks Mr. Savage, and answers himself, hell, it's here! Even more impressive is the 1932 Socialist platform under which Mr. Thomas ran such a bad third. Too long to quote here, it is full of suggestions for measures which are obviously a part of the New Deal, either in esse or in posse.

And with it all Mr. Savage reminds us blandly that the Socialist party, its candidates and its platforms have never been worth a plugged nickel in this country.

What's the answer? Simple. The word Socialist has always had a bad smell about it in these United States. A Socialist was even less respected than a Republican in Mississippi or a Democrat in Vermont. So all the Socialists, except a handful of true-blue old Deutscher die-hards have been calling themselves "Liberals." That 19th century name, dedicated to Individualism, has been appropriated by the Socialists. The good ship Liberalism has been scuttled, but her flag was saved and has been flying coyly at the masthead of the buccaneer craft with rakish rig, manned by the western "Progressives," the university Liberals, the Lippmannites and the Tugwells and all the new Washington crew.

The only question is; does the President know it? Is he the only innocent Liberal left in the country actually believing in Liberalism? Or is he, too. . . .? But we mustn't ask that. Anyway, it's a fine book!

Letters I Would Love to Mail

—By J. P. McEvoy—

Hollywood, Cal.,
Jan. 31, 1934.

TO Whom It May Concern
If It Does,
Anywhere.

Dear Folks: The papers seem to be full of The Next War, especially the papers out here on the Pacific Coast. There seems to be some doubt about when it will start, even more doubt about who will be fighting and what about, but the general idea seems to be that Japan will be fighting Russia, we will be fighting Japan, Germany will attack France and France will then attack Italy and Poland will attack anybody left on the old 'lase.

This leaves Switzerland in a spot, with nobody to attack. Same with Finland and Uruguay.

It will also seem from the papers that all this is set to start, but something is holding up the production. Just what, nobody seems to know. Some say the script hasn't been okayed by Will Hays. Some say everything is waiting for General Johnson to find a few minutes free when he will push the button which starts it. a whole works. O hers say the show can't even go into rehearsal until the Equity Bond has been posted, and none of the nations has enough money . , post it.

SAD, we call it Here one of the greatest shows of our time is being held up just when the world needs it, and why? For the lack of a few dollars. Think of all the men another war would put to work, the money that would be put into circulation! And the words! Such a lot of swell words. And songs. And news reel shots. We might even get rid of that shot of the Macon Over Los Angeles.

Japan is aching for a scrap, so the boys say. So is Russia. So is Germany. And Chekoslovakia. Czecho . . you spell it. George Cohan is burning to write another "Over There." The boys are dying to get back into the trenches. So they say, any way. And not one shot can be fired, not one gamers can be turned until at least two weeks' salary it real money is put on the line by some responsible party.

It would seem this is the time for the motion picture industry to show some real enterprise. Why doesn't Paramount grab it for ward and post the bond for an interest in the movie rights? Why doesn't Metro underwrite all the action on Japanese locations and use the exclusive footage they will get for the asking? Or a picture called, "The Big Jap Parade?" Why doesn't Fox take over the European rights for and cash in with "All Quiet on the Czhec—Szcheo—You Spell It Front?"

THESE are only a few little suggestions, but surely the Big Brass Hats of Hollywood can see an opening when it. is pointed out to them. Here they are spending millions for silly stories for Garbo and Dietrich about wars that happened hundreds of years ago, and for very little more they can have brand new wars that BELONG TO THEM EXCLUSIVELY. With sound. With theme songs by George Cohan such as "Over Here," or Mademoiselle from Tokio, Nitchevo?"

Folks, let's get down to business. Let's stop all this silly stalling. Let's have a war. Let's get everybody into it. Let's make this a super—colossal epic and know it ready to release to all the theaters by the Fourth of July.

Or else, let's take The Next War off the production schedule and make another Mickey Mouse.

Excited by,
J. P. McEVOY.

Reading and Writing

By William Soskin—

LOUIS ADAMIC spent some 19 years becoming an American. He had emigrated to the United States from a tiny Slovene province of Austria when he was a child. At the end of those 19 years he found himself with an American wife, a Guggenheim fellowship and an embarrassed feeling. The feeling was due to the prospect of visiting his family in the old country.

For years Louis Adamic had been writing little notes home to the general effect that he was feeling all right, and how was everybody there? He had received courteous replies. He had a few vague memories of his childhood—but here he was, an American writer of some repute, returning to, a peasant household. His brothers and sisters, Yoshe, Anica, Prance, Tonchka, Mimi, Manuela, Paula and Foldka—what would they look like?

Well, the ship brought Louis and his wife, Stella, into the harbor of Dubrovnik, on the coast of Dalmatia, and they expected a bunch of actors to start hoofing and singing "We are the merry villagers, hey hey!" Instead a representative of the governor of Slovenia boarded the ship, bowed, kissed their hands and welcomed the famous American writer, the pride of Jugoslavia, the local boy who made good, with all the ceremoniousness of a Grover Whalen welcoming the first mother of three tots to swim the English Channel.

Later he found that virtually all of Jugoslavia was resounding with the name of Adamic. He was interviewed and feted and honored as the most famous of Jugoslavia's sons. It is recorded in his new book, The Native's Return.

With Wine Comes Words

THIS was the sensational aspect of Louis Adamic's pilgrimage to the home in which his family had lived for hundreds of years. They were waiting for him. His sturdy, handsome mother had become gray. His father shook with age. His brothers and sisters were tall, good-looking, strong and laughing men and women. They had a natural dignity and restraint. His neighbors had a flush of life and virility about them, the dignity of a simple way of living which he had left behind him, but to which he returned as to a fountain of rejuvenation. Louis found himself laughing and weeping and drinking home-made wine and singing and talking with a strange sense of release.

Louis felt rooted again—and he went on a sensational jag. When a man is in that condition we must forgive even his too frequent use of such words as "beautiful," "true," "good," "simple," "strong" and "rich" in his descriptions of the peasants and the scenery of Croatia, Lubiyana and all other pleasant villages of his home country.

Marrying or Dying

I CONFESS that I am unable to review Mr. Adamic's book justly. There's too much in it. The story of the development of the legend of Mr. Guggenheim, the rich American who was to become a Messiah and who would deliver the downtrodden classes of Jugoslavia, and whom Louis Adamic represented as a faithful disciple, is in itself worthy of an entire volume of modern mythology. In The Native's Return it is only an incident.

The story of the village of Galichnik, a lonely place amid lofty peaks on the boundary between Albania and Jugoslavia, is in itself worthy of a volume of anthropological study. It is a village of grass widows, beautiful women who live sanely and calmly in order to preserve their beauty for the return of their husbands each year. They are called pechalbari (toilers of the world).

Louis Adamic's experiences in joining a marriage celebration that dramatized the social and community importance of a betrothal of two young people, Lubiyana, the purely romantic aspects, and his further experience in observing the villagers' natural attitude toward death when he visited his dying uncle, are also worthy of expanded treatment. They are rich studies in comparative racial psychology.

BEYOND this, The Native's Return is a good travel book. Whatever his political message, The Native's Return is an elegant book if only for the warm human observation it contains.

(The Native's Return, by Louis Adamic. Harper's. $2.75).

A Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

THE trouble with telling ghost stories is that few people believe them, except those most intimately concerned—and that includes the ghost.

No matter how well the narrator talks; no matter how convincing is his speech; no matter how he weaves the authenticity of his tale, and begs to be believed, someone will always cry out, laughingly, "That's all right; but what did you have for dinner last night?"

Such gibes never fail. What was uttered in all seriousness falls instantly to pieces. I have sat around fires on many a night and heard ghost stories at first hand—not the hearsay of people whose word I could not doubt, but authentic experiences that sent the shudders down my spine, and someone has always piped up with a sprightly remark which demoralized the room, and made the teller of the story wish that he hadn't bothered to speak of it.

IT MAY be that, between sleeping and waking, our minds are more receptive to impressions than they usually are; that we sometimes imagine, or dream, that a figure stands by our bed. Most of us have had one or two adventures that afterwards proved to be only fantastic workings of the brain. On the contrary, it is not impossible that Hamlet saw his father's spirit on that platform in Denmark; and Hamlet is as real to me as any person I ever met.

I have my own ghost stories—two of them. The scene of one was laid in a semi-tropical island. I have since heard that it is not uncommon for natives to see a phantom there.

I was stopping at an old inn, part of which had been rebuilt, and it was in the more modern section that I was given a room. One bright moonlight night I was awakened suddenly with that queer feeling that a presence was near my bed, I could clearly see every piece of furniture around me. I even saw my watch, hanging near by, and it was exactly three o'clock. Then I caught sight of an apparition in a purple dressing gown not two feet away from where I lay. He was looking at the wall behind me—staring as though he would like to move through it. Oddly enough, I was not frightened. I merely lay, staring, too. Then I did a daring thing. I decided to touch the ghost. Carefully I leaned from my bed, and reached quietly toward the robe, but the moment my hand was about to feel it, the whole figure disintegrated, as the handkerchief of a prestidigitator dissolves before our eyes.

The next day I learned that my room had once been part of another, and that a young man and his wife had lived here for a long time. The wife died in a bed that must have stood just beyond the place where mine was located, and the young husband had come into the room just too late to see her alive.

MY SECOND story concerns a country house in the upper part of New York State. While I was visiting there, I learned that an old and close friend of mine was very ill. One night I was aroused in the same way, and distinctly saw him across the room, trying valiantly to speak to me. I could hear no word. But his lips were moving rapidly. His whole form, completely dressed, was visibly silhouetted against a window.

When I returned to the city I discovered that he had indeed died on the evening of my experience; and his wife, who had been with him, told me that he made every effort, in his delirium, to send me a message. She leaned close to him to receive it, but could not make it out. Could he, after death, have striven to reach me so far away?

We can only say, with Hamlet:

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
That are dreamt of in our philosophy."

"On'y Us Burglars, Boss"

—By Frank Sullivan—

A YOUNG woman living in a New York hotel was awakened one night recently by a noise in her room. She cried, "Who's there?" and a voice answered, "It's just the Pomeranian."

A while back there was another item in which another intruder, similarly challenged, said, "Meow! I'm the kitty."

These things run in cycles. In about a week, I should say, we will read that a spinster, crying "Who's there?" on hearing a noise beneath her bed, will hear a voice coo, "Just us dust, ma'am."

In any all signs and portents indicate the approach of an epidemic of whimsy in second-story circles. It can be averted only by prompt and vigorous action on the part of both police and citizenry.

THE former must lose no time. It is obvious from the above-quoted examples of current burglar wit that the Robin Hoods of the country have been reading the old one about the farmer who heard a noise in his hen coop and cried "Who's there?" and heard a quavering voice answer, "On'y us hens, boss." Therefore, the course of action to be taken by the gendarmerie is obvious. They should immediately round up all known or suspect burglars throughout the country and submit them to a thorough search for possible concealed copies of Joe Miller's Joke Book. Possession of a copy of that book, or of On a Slow Train Through Arkansas, should be made a violation of parole. And to the penal code should be added a statute providing that any burglar who, to a victim's "Who's in that closet?" answers "Just us fur coats, boss" shall be liable to prosecution for whimsy with intent to slay.

We citizens who constitute the bulk of burglars' victims can help by not laughing at them when, during an invasion of our premises, they pull such ancient wheezes. By laughing at them we encourage them, and the result is that very shortly the burglar becomes a chronic show-off. They are all children at heart, as any scientist worth his salt well knows.

THE fact of the matter is burglars are not really bad and are not really to blame for anything they do. They do not want to steal, in the vulgar sense of that word; they just want to bolster their flagging ego; in other words "show off" by demonstrating how deftly they can abstract a diamond necklace from a Long Island mansion, and how much they can then persuade the fence to pay them for the necklace. This is simply the creative urge asserting itself. Keats writes an ode. I go out and steal a retired bootlegger's wife's pearls. Keats and I are both expressing ourselves. I suspect that a great many burglars steal only because of an unhappy life, so that the sooner we do something about this the safer the ex-bootlegger's wife's pearls are going to be.

All burglars are problem children grown up. Something was pressing on the James boys' brains, I feel sure. And Ediths's Burglar, a very lovable fellow, as we all know, was an unfortunate victim of heredity. His father was a cretin who had married a female cretin, or cretonne.

If I may express in a nutshell in terms of modern psychology (for there's nothing like a nutshell in which to express terms of modern psychology, I sometimes say) burglars burgle only because they are shy. When we victims realize that, we will be apt to have more patience and sympathy with them.

Not, however, to the extent of letting them use us as butts for jokes of the "On'y us hens, boss" school. No, let us draw the line there. Let us demand originality from our burglars. We have the right to do so. If I am to be stripped of my possessions I want it done with humor that is fresh, by somebody with the wit of P. G. Wodehouse, or by somebody like W. C. Fields.

Vagabondia

—By Bruno Lessing—

ROME—A bright young journalist suggests that I change the title of this column. He doesn't think I've been vagabonding enough recently. Maybe he's right. What would you do when the weather's rotten everywhere? At the same time I've been doing a lot of mental vagabonding, haven't I? Temples one day, tripe the next. Jumping from the Roman emperors to salad dressings. Still I'm not averse to changing a title if I can find a better one. We youngsters, you know, are keen on making changes, although not so hot on improvements. How would "Flittings of a Flitter" do? Sounds like the stuff they use for flies. Or "Yawps from Europe"? I'll give a ham sandwich for the best title.

Speaking of ham (and please don't say that I dragged in the subject deliberately because I did) Mrs. Ibrew down a magazine impidently—it was the London Story-Teller—and said "Pshaw!" Which is my cue for suspended animation until she explains.

"The idea!" she said. "Here's a story about a man who was paralyzed and was fond of ham. He told his wife to cut it thin, but she always insisted on cutting off thick slices. Then he suddenly recovered the use of his arms and stabbed her with the knife."

"What an awful crime!" I said.

"I should say so," said Mrs. "But a man wouldn't do a thing like that."

"Oh, I dunno," said I. "I've known many men to cut ham thick." Then I got a dirty look and a sarcastic "Funny!" But I was really serious. Cutting a thick slice of ham, especially a smoked ham, is one of the cardinal sins. The slices should be cut the thickness of tissue paper. You need a long, very sharp knife and a lot of practice to hit it right. I suspect that, somewhere, there is a ham-slicing college.

Music to Some Ears

THERE'S a chap who passes my window every morning selling vegetables. He has a musical cry—seven or eight repetitions of the same note and then a higher note which dies out in a descendin' key. It reminds me of a passage in some symphony which I cannot place. I love to hear it.

I've been trying to recall pedlars' cries. The women who chant along London streets selling lavender; fish pedlars in Dublin; chimney sweeps in small German towns; knife grinders in New York. They seem to be dying out. Paris used to be full of musical cries in the morning, but the police put a stop to them. I'd rather hear them than the honk of auto horns.

Buying a 'Dead Man'

I'M getting along nicely in Italian, although I've found that my book is a bit old-fashioned. I know how to ask for a carriage with two horses and a driver, and how to say to the driver, "You may feed the horses while we are at the luncheon." But I don't yet know how to say, "Can't you change speed without grinding the gears?" or "Has the motor got the pip today?" I have to content myself with "There is of the derangement."

But I did strike a nifty the other day. I went into a furniture store to buy a hatrack—you know, a stand with hooks on with branches on top. We call them "costumers" in New York. I didn't see any in the shop and they didn't know what I wanted. So I drew on the back of my drawing in not quite as good as Rafael's but they got the idea. "Uomo morto!" they exclaimed. A "dead man!" And sure enough they brought one up from the basement. What a swell name! Every time I hang my trousers up at night I get a little shiver. It's a tricky language, I tell you.

Strabo Had His Say

IN the Vatican there is a gallery devoted to ancient maps. I spent a pleasant, superior hour marveling how dumb the common people were to believe that the earth was flat. Then last night having no detective story on hand, I picked up from a volume on ancient Greece. There I read a passage from Strabo, the greatest geographer of antiquity.

"Personal travel experience," he wrote, "alike inform us that the earth we inhabit is an island; since wherever men Lave approached the termination of the land, the sea, which we designate ocean, has been met with; and reason assures us of the similarity of those places which our senses have not been permitted to survey."

Well, I got a kick out of it. The same arrogant, dictatorial, dogmatic, flat-footed manner in which so many economists, professors and other "public leaders" spill their modern tripe.

Years

I CROSSED the silent meadow land,
I followed down the narrow road,
My purse a penny in my hand,
A crust of bread my only load.
But I could see a gypsy fire,
A thread of yellow, tempting light;
And there Adventure and Desire
Were calling,—calling through the night.

I did not mind the stony way,
The thorns that caught my ragged coat;
My heart was young and I was gay,
And there was music in my throat.
Oh! dastard years, of Wealth you gave,
But you have quenched the Gypsy fire;
Oh! dastard years, could not save
Even the glory of Desire.

Lighted Candles

YOU who cry that life is dull
And the world so commonplace
Never beneath the moon have looked
Or into another's face.
Think how candles are forgot
Until once lit, oh, friend,
And then—a hundred memories
At one day's end.

HOT . . . From HOLLYWOOD

By GWYNN

Hollywood, Feb. 1—With every studio in the business now going heavily for classics and fantasies, radio is trying to clear the screen rights to the Washington Irving story of "Rip Van Winkle."

A few weeks ago, Edward Small, an independent producer, started negotiations for the tale, but apparently has dropped the idea. As soon as Radio paves the way for the picturization of "Rip Van Winkle," Kenneth MacGowan will produce it for this studio on a big scale.

And having gotten the announcement of a colossal screening of "The Last Days of Pompeii" in technicolor off its chest, Radio now announces that the next film to be produced by them in the special color process in which Jock Whitney has invested a million or more will be "Cyrano de Bergerac," in which John Barrymore will be the star, having long wanted to bring this classic to pictures.

NRA Aid Into Films

It is "hot-tipped" all over Hollywood that Sol Rosenblatt, special NRA deputy is here for the especial purpose of finding himself an important berth in the picture industry, and that he will quickly retire from "official business" the moment he lands one! Rosenblatt, with his wife, the David Selznicks and the Myron Selznicks hopped in a plane Saturday noon, flew to Caliente for a quick lunch, a quick look at the races, and flew back to the Beverly-Wilshire in Hollywood for a quick dinner and dance. Others at the hotel the same eve were Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard, King Vidor with Betty Hill, Sue Carol, Edward Everett Horton, Mary Nash, Joan Blondell with George Barnes and Walter Wanger.

Notables in Raid

There were a lot of celebrities at the Colony Club that same night—the night it was raided, by the way. Among them were the Buddy de Sylvas, Helen Twelvetrees and her husband Jack Woody, Lou Holtz and Helen Vinson, the Wesley Ruggles, the Skeets Gallaghers, Glenda Farrell with Bob Riskin, and Lee Tracy with Isabel Jewell.

By the way Isabel's father, a doctor, has been in Hollywood several months undergoing treatment by eye specialists, who at one time had little hope of saving his sight. Now Mrs. Lee Jewell, mother of the actress, is here for a stay and both she and her daughter are happy over the news that the physicians now think they can save Mr. Jewell's eyesight after all.

Role for Woods

Young Donald Woods has so impressed his ease at Warner with his work in "As the Earth Turns" and "Merry Wives of Reno" that he has been given a really important role in "Gentleman From Frisco" (formerly called "The Golden Gate"), now being directed by William Dieterle. The studio figures Woud as definitely a star bet —and plans to handle him as such! Others in the film are Lyle Talbot, Bette Davis, Margaret Lindsay and Arthur Byron.

Which reminds me of a loud howl we had the other evening when someone told us the following: Al Green, who directed "As the Earth Turns," went to the particular producer on this picture during its making and said:

"I've just seen Frank Borzage's picture 'Man's Castle,' and realize that we have exactly the same opening scene in my picture. I think we ought to remake the scene because it's just like Borzage's opening—a park bench, a girl, a man—in the identical situation!"

Answered the producer: "HOW can you say it's the same? One takes place at night—and the other in the daytime!" (?).

Star Cheers Sick

Mimi Jordan, blonde English actress, still at Fox but soon to free lance, "does her bit" by taking Hollywood to the youngsters at the Orthopaedic Hospital here. Twice every week she visits the kids, tells them all about their favorite stars, finds out what autographed pictures they want, and gets them for them. Then she leaves magazines and a few goodies —and leaves! What makes this story very nice, is that it is true.

After three months of negotiations between Ralph Morgan and the Fox Company, the actor has gotten his release from that studio and has turned free-lancer. Morgan objected to being constantly loaned out to other studios, insisting that if he is to be "farmed out," he should get the benefit of the extra money which any studio usually demands when it lends one of its contract players. His first assignment as a "free" man was a part in "Men of Tomorrow" (formerly called "The Paul Street Boys"), which Frank Borzage is making as one of Columbia's big bets for the coming season.

No Rent for Dick

Richard Boleslawsky, who has directed three pictures in a row at MGM without a day's rest between assignments, will start a holiday after just another night's sleep! He is to megaphone "Streets of New York," with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy in the leads. Gable has just completed "Men in White" and is off on a lion-hunt in the wilds of Utah, but will rush back to start this picture next week because "Soviet," in which he was to have appeared with Wally Beery, is not yet ready for production. Don't be surprised if the ensuing on "Streets of New York" is suddenly changed, though, because Clark has been announced for the lead in at least three new MGM pictures and a fellow can be in only just so many places at once.

Random Shots: Dorothy Jordan's kid sister, Mary, gets her first picture job in "Finishing School" at RKO . . . George Raft, recovering from a bad flu attack . . . All the gals in town want to be Bing Crosby's leading lady in "She Loves Me Not" when Paramount makes the picture of that stage-hit . . . Arthur Kober, w. k. scribe, can't get that leave of absence now—so instead of going to Spain, he's "settling" for Palm Springs . . . Ralph Forbes, ex-spouse of Ruth Chatterton, spent most of the week-end down there with Ruthie and George Brent . . . William Demarest, well-known vaudevillian, is making a return trip to pictures, being "between tests" at the moment . . . Martha Sleeper, back in town, gets a top spot in "Double Door" at Paramount . . . Sign on a local theater says: "Meet the Baron" and "My Woman." . . . Greta Garbo returns to MGM Feb. 15 to start in "The Painted Veil," by Somerset Maugnan . . . We have an idea that the Lola Lane-Al Hall wedding will never come off . . . Alice Faye has been stepping out with a tall good-looking fellow that nobody knows! . . . And that must be something with Lanny Ross and his pretty manageress, Olive White, because they are never apart! . . . Ric Cortez will try to bring back a pipe from Mont Hart when he leaves New York—It's been "promised" for two years! . . .

Building up an all-star cast for "The Key," Warners yesterday put Warren William into one of the leads in the film which Archie Mayo directs. Kay Francis and William Powell have already been given the starring roles.

MGM has purchased an unpublished short story by Kathleen Norris, called "Gram"—all about an old Irish lady who goes from poverty to riches. The yarn is slated to be a starring vehicle for May Robson.

All O. K. in the South

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Down in the sunny South they know that everything is all right. Was talking to a man in Savannah and he says prosparity has come back.

His explanation was simple. He said everybody had quit their jobs and was working for the CFW.

The ones who weren't working then took th vacant jobs. Even if they didn't arrange the thing in alphabetical order, they managed to get the ball rolling.

It shows some kind of action, and action is what we want, as the monkey said when he grabbed the lion by the ears.

Thrilling Story of Jungle Life

CHAPTER THREE

"The cab drove out to Central airport. Just Oreta—nobody else. However . . ." Grahame's stare sought out Paula, who sat with expressionless face, upon the chains longue. "However, they have a record of the number he called from the lobby. He called this house. Paula . . . what did he say?"

The girl looked up defiantly —"He asked if Miss Kent was in."

"That's all."

"That was all."

"Didn't ask to speak with her?"

Her face was a little white; her lips trembled. She drew in a fluttering breath. "I didn't know?" she said breathlessly. "Don Raoul—he is a countryman of mine—said that Miss Kent had promised to marry him. But that she wouldn't because of her contract with the Consolidated. They'd break her contract if she married. He is rich. He does not care for her contract. So—"

Winslow interrupted with a harsh laugh—"so never mind the rest. Where was he going to take her? D'ye know?"

Paula's face was drawn with misgiving. She answered, "I don't know. Mexico, I guess."

Winslow, "you get upstairs with Paula . . . and Grahame."

They passed out of the house and stepped into Winslow's blue roadster at the curb. The wheels spun; they lurched forward. They roared down to Santa Monica Boulevard, thence into Wilshire. Swinging right into San Vicente, they flashed by the lights of the Pico crossing.

The blue roadster slid to a stop before a small building. Behind it a hangar bulked whitely against the dark sky.

Winslow called to an attendant: "Anybody move out of here in the last hour or two?"

"Uhhuh. Closed job. Mickey took 'em. Just about an hour ago."

"Don't know him. Who'd he take?"

"Whoopee party to Caliente. Two men and a woman. The girl was almost out."

SQUEEZE HIS HAND

Winslow snapped a light to a cigarette.

"Jeff own anything faster?"

"Not conditioned . . . there's a D. H.—an old crate—in hangar one, but I wouldn't fly her on a bet."

"While we're looking her over, get Jeff on the phone. Tell him Spin Winslow and Frank Grahame want to take that crate of his down to Mexico and wreck it."

They had the motor chugging on its warm-up when the man came back. He said, "Jeff says it's all right. But he says don't wreck the ship unless you can kill each other doing it."

The motor roared, the plane lurched, Grahame strained against his belt as the wheels left the ground and Winslow arched in a steep bank out of the field.

SAN DIEGO AHEAD

They roared over a crescent of light that was San Diego. Tia Juana appeared below them, then the engine's crescendo broke into a staccato of backfires and tempered explosions that told Frank that they were gliding to a landing.

The wheels grounded at the edge of the field and they bumped to a standstill. Climbing out of the plane, the men broke into a trot. Frank heading toward the edge of the field, Winslow diagonally toward a dark line of planes. Frank noticed a man appear, walking toward his companion.

The two met in middfield. They paused a moment. Grahame saw his companion grasp the arm of the other, who pointed toward the edge of the field.

Winslow turned. "Hi! Frank!" he called. "C'm here!"

Frank joined them.

"We're right, Frank. They were here. What's-his-name here recognized Kent . . . a car met them."

"A car? Where'd it go?"

"Took the Encinada road," he said.

They lifted out of the field and roared across the low range that lay between them and the coast. They swung south. For twenty minutes by the illuminated dial of Frank's wrist watch they followed the coast.

PLANE SHAKES

The plane lurched, leveled, and Frank was conscious of a shock and the sounds of cracking and of rending about him. Sea water, in a never-ending cascade, poured over his head.

Tons of water descended upon him, driving him down into the blackness.

Grahame, bending over the prostrate flyer high up on the little shelving beach, saw Winslow's eyes open. For an instant the eyes were blank; whereupon consciousness flooded them. He smiled uncertainly.

Grahame strode to the side of the highway and began pulling rocks into the middle of the road.

They seated themselves on roadside boulders.

Frank stepped behind his improvised barricade of stones and drew his weapon. The stones across the road would stop the car he was sure —unless the driver elected to crash through.

HEARD BRAKES SQUEAL

Frank could not discover the car's make or condition behind the dazzling light. The automobile approached the rocks strung across the road; he heard the springs squeak their protest at the jouncing. Brakes squealed. A man within the car called something unintelligible.

As the driver's door opened he saw suddenly that this was the tan car that had crashed Janice Kent's motor at Hollywood intersection three nights before.

A man stepped out of the open door. Startled recognition leaped into his eyes as he saw Grahame. Over his shoulder Frank was conscious of a gleam of metal. Instinctively he swerved.

Expert Explains 'Backward Finesse'

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

There is a rather unusual form of finesse which bridge players call the "backward finesse." This play is based upon practically certain knowledge of the location of the card to be finessed against and the knowledge that the location of it is such that the ordinary finesse would lose.

East	South	West	North
1 N T (1)	Double (2)	Pass	Pass (3)
Redouble (4)	Pass (5)	2 ♢	Pass (6)
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	2 N T (7)
Pass	4 ♣ (8)	Pass	Pass
Pass

(1) A better bid than one notrump with East's hand would be the shaded bid of one club. Another alternative would be to pass.

(2) South, with a strong six-card major suit, doubles in preference to bidding, of course.

(3) In vew of North's 2 honor-tricks plus and his partner's Take-out Double of one notrump, the pass is clearly indicated. As a matter of fact, if the hand were played at notrump East would probably take but 2 tricks.

(4) A request for his partner to bid.

(5) South awaits developments.

(6) North might well have bid here.

(7) This is the correct bid as it discloses strength in the other suits not bid by South.

(8) As a matter of fact, a game at notrump could be made as West's hand contains no re-entry.

West's Opening lead was the diamond Queen, and it appeared, when the Dummy went down, that South must lose one trick each in spades, diamonds and clubs and probably one in hearts, which would set the contract. The heart Queen seemed clearly placed in the East hand in view of the Opening bid and the weakness of the East hand in other suits. It was possible, however, that East did not hold the heart Ten, in which case the backward finesse would prevent the loss of a trick in hearts. The play of the heart suit, which is all that is in question, was as follows: The Knave was led from the North hand, East covered with the Queen, and South won the trick with the King. The nine was now returned, South intending to finesse if West did not cover. In the actual play, West played the Ten. The trick was won with the Ace and the heart 8 prevented the loss of any heart tricks. A successful backward finesse assured the success of the contract.

STAN LAUREL'S ALIMONY DISPUTE TIES UP HAL ROACH'S "BABES IN TOYLAND" FILM

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton May Replace Noted Comedy Team in Cast

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Feb. 1—The sad-faced Stan Laurel is growing sadder by the minute. He is taking a suspension on his Hal Roach contract and at the moment is receiving not one penny in salary. The rotund Oliver Hardy is sad, too, because he is out of a partner and unless Stan has a change of heart Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton will replace the famous comedy team in "Babes in Toyland."

The Laurel peeve isn't aimed at Oliver nor is it aimed at his boss, Hal Roach. It's leveled, so we hear, against his ex-wife. At the time of the divorce Laurel turned practically everything he owned over to his wife and in return for his freedom also agreed to give her a large part of his salary.

Lolette O. Parsons

Realizing he wasn't really working for himself Stan asked for an alimony compromise which was refused him. So-oo-o, he has decided his health isn't robust enough for him to continue working in strenuous comedies.

Here is a smart young man. Even Samuel Goldwyn, admittedly one of the best showmen in pictures, will have to give him credit. While all the critics were doing nipups over Anna Sten in "Nana," Herbert Bregstein bought the American rights to "Tempest," a foreign picture featuring Miss Sten and Emil Jannings. He plans to release it before "Nana" is shown. Young Bregstein, whose first introduction to the movie world came when he brought "Maedchen in Uniform" to America, is a college youth with uncanny judgment on what is box office. Even in his affairs of the heart young Bregstein is a step ahead of the procession. He, and not Jed Harris is really Margaret Sullavan's boy friend.

Just about every writer of importance has tried out Hollywood, so we are not surprised to hear that Irvin Cobb, foremost humorist of his day, is listening to an offer from Hal Roach. What a coup for Hal if the gentleman from Paducah decides to put some of his special brand of comedy into the Roach pictures. And, dear friends, it's more than just a passing rumor: Mr. Cobb has expressed his interest in coming to Hollywood and negotiations are, at this moment, under way.

Maybe Alice Faye will be glad to know what Winfield Sheehan has in mind for her. I met her the other day and she was a little downcast and worried, for she had had no word from the Fox company about her next picture. She was in a state whether or not all the publicity in the Rudy Vallee-Fay Webb divorce had hurt her status. According to her boss, Winfield Sheehan, and the boss of the Fox studios, Alice Faye will play the sweetheart in "Now I'll Tell," the story of Arnold Rothstein. Spencer Tracy, when he finishes "The Show Off," will step into the Rothstein role.

Chatter in Hollywood

Evelyn Venable is expected to return from Cincinnati in about a week. Evelyn isn't afraid of anyone in the world but "papa," who is annoyed at her for making good movies. Mr. Venable, who wants his daughter to be another Dixie or an Ellen Terry, cuts out every unfavorable item printed against Hollywood and sends it to Evelyn just to discourage her. That's why her friends tell me she was so irked when we pretan that she and Hal Mohr had reached the hand-holding stage.

Joel McCrea is willing to play second fiddle to Frances Dee any time. Radio wants her for the lead in "And Let Who Will Be Clever," by Alden Nash, modern, sophisticated comedy drama. If Frances accepts Joel McCrea will bow out as the leading man because he still feels it's bad business for man and wife to try to compete for screen honors. The expected McCrea heir isn't due until September so there is every reason to believe that Miss Dee will accept the job and Joel will wait for another picture. Ray Harris, who did such a swell job on "Three-Cornered Moon," is adapting "And Let Who Will Be Clever."

Interrupted Walter Wanger and Raoul Walsh in conference. What's a conference in my life? Three two leads who produced and directed, respectively, Marion Davies' big success, "Going Hollywood," had their heads together over specifications for what looked to me like Buckingham Palace. It was in reality a picture of the historic Danbridge mansion, that has belonged to the Martha Washington family for generations. It's to be used in "Operator 13," Marion's next picture. A replica of this famous old house which has been a show place for generations in Martinsburg, Va., will be reproduced in a huge set. "Operator 13" gets off to a start this week and so far the lineup is Marion Davies, Gary Cooper, Ned Sparks, the Mills brothers and Larry Adler.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Spring has come. MRS. RICHARD BARTHELMESS proved it by wearing a delicate blue suit at the tennis matches; KATHRYN CARVER MENJOU in bright green, BEBE DANIELS looked her prettiest in a new spring suit of the palest gray with shoes, bag and hat to match; MARIAN NIXON had everyone looking in her direction when she corralled a strange girl to pose with her and RIAN JAMES for photographs; she was at the matches with the former Brooklyn columnist; PAULETTE GODDARD and CHARLIE CHAPLIN were in front seats; KAY FRANCIS in a strictly tailored suit, was in the Barthelmess party, also COUNT CARPEGNA; CONSTANCE BENNETT sat directly in front of them with CHARLES FURTHMAN and GILBERT ROLAND; another tennis-minded party included RONALD COLMAN, ELIZABETH ALLEN, MRS. HOWARD HAWKS and CAROLE LOMBARD; the KATHARINE CORNELL opening had tremendous competition with the tennis matches getting so many Hollywood folk; HAROLD LLOYD nearly fell out of his chair in his excitement over the twenty-three games played in the second set by Tilden and Vines; RED GRANGE listening to the MILLS BROTHERS at the Cotton Club in company with KATHRYN CARVER MENJOU and the TOWNSEND NETCHERS Five dollar tops will be charged for the GRETA GARBO opening at GRAUMAN'S CHINESE Feb 9. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

On Stage and Screen

Leave it to that expert William Powell to point the one way to love, for Bette Davis, in this scene from "Fashions of 1934," lavish production at the Metropolitan tomorrow.

Fifi D'Orsay, ail vivacious star, to be seen in person, on the stage of the RKO Keith Boston, tomorrow. On screen, she was last seen here in Marion Davies' film, "Going Hollywood."

Opening Day for Fine Arts

George Kraska, reopens the Fine Arts theater today, showing for the first time in Boston, Rene Clair's French film "July 14," (Quatorze Juillet). The theater, in accordance with Mr. Kraska's earlier management, will maintain a continuous policy, operating daily from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m.

Closing Date

Joint Recital at Morning Musicale

By MOSES SMITH

The fourth of the Boston Morning Musicales, at the Statler yesterday, was what the program quaintly called a "joint recital." Disregarding the imputations thus cast on an estimable hostelry, let us address ourselves to the two performers, Maria Jeritza and Albert Spalding, who gave an engrossing concert.

Mme Jeritza was heard here in "Tosca" earlier in the season, and she will return to the stage of the Boston Opera House next week. Her operatic prowess is too familiar to need underlining. In yesterday's program she revealed her exceptional abilities as a concert singer. Only one operatic aria was on the list, the old chestnut "Suicidio," from "La Gioconda." For the rest, Mme. Jeritza sang five well-chosen German lieder, two songs in French and two in English.

In these songs Mme. Jeritza was a most persuasive interpreter and, on the whole, an alert musician. Without resorting to operatic distortions she was able to give a most vital presentation of a song like Schumann's "Widmung," a most poetic version of Strauss' "Allerseelen." Her voice had rough edges, but it also had a warm core. In French she was equally successful, maintaining beautifully the atmosphere of Debussy's "Beau Soir."

Mr. Spalding's position as the foremost of American violinists is based on his uncommon musicianship, sensitive phrasing, and his most delicate—almost feminine—grace off style. These qualities were abundantly apparent in numbers of Vecchi, Bach and Corelli, which he played yesterday. Even in the virtuosic, displayful Rondo Caprieioso of Saint-Saens the same virtues did not abandon him. Throughout the concert his bowarm was a model for other violinists, and more than made up for an occasionally insecure left hand.

Gypsy R. Lee Again at Park

Gypsy Rose Lee, Broadway dance star, has returned to the Minsky Park Theater as headliner in a colorful, satirical revue titled "Rosie Nosie from Duncan." With her as principals are Ann Norton, Hazel Miller, Sunny "Smiles" Blane, fan dancer, and stellar comedians.

Delighted

Comedy Stars for Keith's

To the RKO-Keith screen Saturday comes "Hips, Hips, Hooray," musical extravaganza, starring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, with Ruth Etting, Dorothy Lee and Thelma Todd featured.

"Hips, Hips, Hooray" combines laughter, music and chorus in its tomfoolery. Wheeler and Woolsey are seen as cosmetic salesmen whose office is the city street. Among the big songs are "Keep Romance Alive," "Keep on Doin' What You're Doin'" and "Tired of It All."

Barrymore Film

"This Side of Heaven," picture dealing with interwoven aspirations and disappointments of a typical everyday household, will be the attraction at Loew's State on Friday. The cast is headed by Lionel Barrymore and includes Fay Bainter, Mae Clarke,

Uptown's Show

On the same program the Uptown presents Lilian Harvey in "My Lips Betray."

Screen Stars on New Bill

Two outstanding Hollywood personalities, Benny Rubin and Fifi D'Orsay, are billed to appear in person at the Keith-Boston, commencing Friday. Rubin is a Boston boy and elaborate plans are being made to receive him as is befitting a home-town boy who has made good. His fame was acquired through comedy roles in many pictures including "Naughty Baby," "Miriamette," "Imperfect Ladies" and Lord Byron of Broadway."

Benny Rubin

Fifi D'Orsay, in arranging the program for her short vaudeville tour, has included several of the songs that she made hits in sound pictures

KEEP "WINDOWS OF SOUL" BRIGHT -:- STREAMLINES FROM MOLDING FOUNDATION

Learn Polishing Tricks From Lovely-Eyed Beauties of Uncertain Age

By Carol Ames

IN DISCUSSING FEMININE beauty someone once aptly said that the eyes are the windows of the soul, and it is important to keep them bright and shining.

The freshest, smoothest complexion, prettiest wave, and most careful attention to grooming can't draw attention from tired, lack-luster eyes . . . eyes which lack the sparkle of health and happiness.

Many women who are very careful about other attributes of beauty neglect their eyes. Not that they require as much care and attention as other parts of the body . . . but they do have to get their full quota of sleep and rest and general consideration.

No mistake is so serious in consequences to the eyes are that of postponing the wearing of glasses. To neglect getting them may result in weakening your eyes to such an extent that wearing glasses may eventually need to become a fixed habit. And the nerve strain which results if you delay eye examination adds wrinkles and lines to your face . . . and years to your apparent age. A woman is only as old as she looks, you know.

A famous New York eye specialist told me the other day that amateur efforts to remove cinders and other foreign substances which may get into the eyes are the cause of many infections. That's a good thing to remember next time a cinder blows into your eye on a windy day. If you possibly can, have a doctor or an experienced nurse attend to such delicate operations.

A good eye lotion will do wonders for tired eyes. Keep an eye cup or medicine dropper handy in your medicine closet and use it often.

When your eyes are very tired from use, or from exposure to the wind and sun, a soft cloth wrung out of warm water and applied to the lids is most soothing. It's been the practice of many a society woman of uncertain years but undeniable beauty to relax for a few moments each day with cotton pads soaked in witch hazel placed over closed lids.

Wouldn't you like to know another easy effective rejuvenating remedy for tired eyes which I learned about from a well-known eye specialist? He told me this simple home treatment soothes and relaxes tired, tense nerves and gently stimulates the circulation, thus erasing that tired, drawn look from around the eyes.

I'll gladly pass this valuable information on to you, free of charge, if you'll enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request. Address your letter to Carol Ames, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston

Beauty Questions and Answers

Pretty Hairline

Question: I have several hairs on my forehead which are not long enough to comb back with the rest of my hair, but are long enough to be quite noticeable. I am a brunette, which makes it all the worse. I began to pluck them out, and now they are growing in again. Please advise me what to do. How may I make my forehead appear higher? I'd like to have you answer in the paper.—J. C. D. Roxbury.

Answer: Why not let the short hairs on your forehead alone, until they are long enough to comb back? While they are growing you might try pinning them into place, or else curl them and comb them down on your forehead to form a small bang. If your forehead is pretty you can make it seem higher by combing your hair back softly from your face

Flushed Skin

—Mrs. R. B., Boston.

Answer: A florid, flushed skin can't be corrected by external applications alone. It may be caused by not drinking enough water, too heavy meals, and not including plenty of green vegetables, fruit juices and milk in your daily diet. Oddly enough, a bit of cheek rouge may make your skin more attractive. Powder must match your skin, as too light a shade would be too apparent.

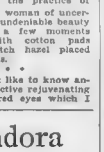
Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

I read your column with interest every evening, and I am hoping you can help me out, too. Mine is a grave problem.



Soon I've got to go hunting for a job to keep the big, bad wolf from the door, but I'm afraid I won't stand a chance. Not due to unemployment, etc., but because I am painfully self-conscious, and a dull dud. No poise, personality, savoir-faire or what have you. I'm a total loss in a crowd . . . can't converse or hold a person's interest for two minutes after being introduced. And to make it worse I'm ordinary looking and oh . . . so short—only four feet nine and one-half inches to be exact—but not fat, thank heavens.

I am digesting a lot of information on how to improve one's personal appearance, so if you can only suggest something to give me that sparkling personality . . . I will appreciate it. Seriously, Pandora, I do want to stop being a wall-flower.

PETITE FEMME.

DEAR PETITE

You can't moralize a person into defeating an inferiority complex, for the whole thing is absolutely up to the individual. Just give yourself a chance. Your size means nothing. Look at Napoleon . . . but don't let any sunken road in the battle of life make a Waterloo for you.

You're as good as the next person, and the odds are that you are a great deal better, so have confidence in yourself, and that will give others the feeling that they can rely upon you. Be a man, Madam, be a man.

PANDORA.

Ideas Galore in Dainty Spring-like Organdie and Chintz Bedroom

We are indebted to a motion picture for the bedroom setting, shown above, that simply teems with ideas. Although it belongs to no definite period, it has a French Provincial touch or two, since it is supposed to be part of that type of home.

Actually, it may be adapted to practically any type of house, since it is the very essence of femininity. The color scheme is green, white and dusty pink.

Writing a Note of Appreciation

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Recently my sister passed away in a small town in a distant state. The women's organization of that town sent my mother, who is a widow, and me a check, as we are in poor circumstances.

Please, Mrs. Beeckman, advise me how to thank this organization for the check, as my mother and I were very friendly with the women of the club.

E.

How very kind you are to permit me to help you about this . . . I appreciate it so much. And how very kind these good women were to you and your mother.

You must write them a most appreciative kind of note, and perhaps this would suggest it to you

Dear Mrs. Crane:

Mother has asked me to write you to tell you how deeply, how very deeply, we appreciate your and the women's organization's great kindness and great goodness to us. Will you please let us thank you, and will you please tell the other members of our gratitude? We were so deeply touched by your wonderful thoughtfulness of us that we find it difficult to find words to tell you about it. But do know that your check was a godsend and such a wonderful help to us in these difficult days. Thank you, thank you, with our hearts full of gratitude.

Mother hopes to see you all again soon, and then to tell you in person her appreciation. And we both send dearest love and best wishes for your new year.

Most sincerely yours.

By Annice Brink

PERHAPS IT IS a pity, and again perhaps it is not—depending on which side of the fence you're on—but it is true that the glamorous folk of the screen exert so much attention to their personal selves that many a juicy tidbit of interior decorating goes unsung and unnoticed. Because it seems that here is a prolific field for ideas—even lavish settings can present an occasional idea that may be adopted for the most modest home—we are going to print from time to time photographs of lovely motion picture settings that simply teem with hints on arrangement, color and actually have news value in "what's new for the home."

For a young girl's room, for a Dresden china type—for anyone who is fond of feminine things—the dressing table and window treatment shown may be transplanted, even though you have but a modest budget. The color scheme is green, white and dusty pink—all three being repeated in the wall paper, the chintz, the hand tufted rug, the vases and the popular china bric-a-brac.

Tiers of finely pleated organdie with an edging of apple green drape the dressing table. In this case, the organdie covers the table top, but for utility's sweet sake it is wisest to have a glass top cut to fit. The table itself need be inexpensive, and might easily be made at home

A stool with a hoop attached to the bottom, or one especially made in a cartwheel effect, so that the organdie may be tied in with a green taffeta ribbon is not a difficult accomplishment for the ingenious women. In fact, it's much harder to open a door with a hairpin or a can with a razor blade than it should be to concoct such a stool.

Do notice the small hanging shelves of painted wire. They also should not present too much of a copying problem. Since it is the fashion now to indulge in colorful china figures, without loading the atmosphere with them, your own good taste will guide you in filling such hanging shelves.

The chintz overdrapes follow the line of the sheer white glass curtains. They are held back by enamel plaques, and the valance is white box pleated chintz.

I'm firm in my belief that such photographs are of actual interest to every home maker. Am I right? On your indication of interest in seeing more of them, will rest their further appearances. I'd like to hear from you!

Jewelry Can Change Its Spots

THE MAGICIAN'S wand is possible for all of us now that clever designers have made jewelry that can change its spots, so to speak. Pins can be taken apart to become a pair of clips. Long, lavish jeweled necklaces can be taken apart to form four bracelets and a pin. Clip earring, can be worn in the ears or on a dress.

There is wide latitude in the choice of necklaces. Pearls are made more formal with jewelled ornaments on each side, which match the clasps of the bracelets. Chokers of fine rhinestones, long necklaces with large pendants, semi-precious stone pendants set in gold on gold chains, and jewel colored clear beads with rhinestones are being worn.

LARGE SAFETY PINS decorated everything last season—bags, hats, gowns, and even shoes. Another commoner has been elevated to high rank by a prominent American designer. This time it is the paper clip, done in gold or silver finish, several times its natural size. With the addition of initials, which may be snapped into the frame of the clip, you will have a smart touch for bag, hat, neckline or belt.

Not tough

THERE'S no tough stringy meat in Deerfoot Farm Sausage. Only the choice tender pieces of fresh pork—the kind you would buy. And they are chopped instead of ground or mashed in order to preserve the delicate flavor of the meat. Seasoned to perfection by our secret blend of spices. Try Deerfoot Farm Sausage today—at home or in restaurants. Links or patties. Economical!

INSPIRED BY ROLLICKING COACHMAN HAT

By PRUNELLA WOOD

A coachman's hat inspired the gray tweed felt hat above, with its stitched green antelope band. Spring may be a smiling season, but when it frowns and turns raw, you will appreciate such a hat with your tweeds.

IT looked for a while last winter as if even the bowler hat, in all its original masculinity, was going to be taken over by girls who went haywire over "mannish" hats. The prospects for late winter are much brighter, however, and the hats we see that have a man-tailored look are distinctly feminine pieces and nothing that laments for pants and a pair of braces to keep them sartorial company.

Hairy tweeds and felts which can be shaped softly to the appearance of blocked hats are being used a lot for the models. They can be had in colors that blend with any sort of tailored woolen ensemble, and they are a little bit more sporting and masculine than smooth felt though they remain so feminine.

The hats that stem from man's Fedora are legion, but all of them are more soignee and adaptable than those of yesteryear. Grays are good; so are dark greens, coppery shades, and wine or berry shades.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Every now and then we are urged to be optimistic and are scolded for being gloomy or fearful. But to me it looks as though this world were still flooded with beautiful optimism and filled with "Pollyannas" who naively believe that they can "beat the game".

Helen Rowland

Believe it or not there are still lots of bright fellows who are just waiting for another chance to hang up their stockings —and shirts—in Wall Street for Santa Claus to fill. And there are lots and lots of people who still fondly believe that "recovery" means the return to Easy Street and easy money, high-pressure salesmanship, promotion schemes and Bigger and Better Rackets!

Snug-Fitting Fashions Set Single Standard for 1934 Silhouettes

By Victoria Gaines

FIGURING THINGS OUT is a favorite fashion sport, as well as a financial one these days. With as many different figures as there are women, and only one smart silhouette to fit them all, it is easily understood how "figuring" may become a fine art.

Slim, streamline effects are the modern silhouette of the moment. With snug-fitting fashions setting the single standard in silhouettes for 1934, remodeling all sorts of 1933 and 1932 figures to conform to the accepted mode is no light task.

It's being done these days by methods that smack somewhat of modern magic. If your pet figure fault is a "spare tire" or "dowager's hump" between the shoulder blades, cheer up—for the 1934 corset has specially constructed features to correct these flaws.

CLEVER FRONT PANELS

If your secret sorrow—sometimes not so secret, at that!—is a relaxed bust or abdomen, there are corsets designed to correct and conceal this very condition. There's a new corset with a clever front panel closing that's just the thing for the most discouraged tummy.

Other models are made to melt away, apparently, the too-too solid flesh around the thighs, since this type of figure must be sure to wear a corselette that is long enough and firm enough to control the curves below. And if the grief of your life is fleshy shoulders, you should wear a low-cut corselette, so that no rolls appear over the top, and the flesh is evenly distributed.

WHICH TYPE ARE YOU?

Roughly speaking, all figure faults fall into one of three general groups—average, top-heavy or hip-heavy.* If your bust over balances the rest of your figure, you come under the top-heavy class, to which 10 per cent of all figures belong.

If you're the other way round, with too large hips, you're included in the 20 per cent that forms the hip-heavy group. And if your hips and bust are in proportion, as are 70 per cent of all figures, then you have nothing further to worry about. These are the scientific figures by which our stylists achieve the fashion figures so smart this season.

Entertaining Large Group

By Martha Lee

Do you feel a party coming on? One is apt to now that the Christmas season is far enough behind us so that we can forget the rush and hustle of it, and our February holidays are still a few weeks off.

Maybe you are president of your Women's Club, or the Bridge Club and want to entertain the members, or you have some interesting speaker to present to your group—then have a reception! Its the easiest way to entertain a large group of people who come together for sociability only.

It gives the hostess a chance to fall back on the buffet style of service, popular with hostess and guests alike as every one looks after their own wants, more or less; although the hostess generally marshals a few of her intimate friends to watch out for the comfort of her guests.

Have the food simple for a large group—and here is a suggestion for a menu that will easily serve 50 people:

Hot Bouillon
Chicken Salad
Salmon Sandwiches
Deviled Ham Sandwiches
Roquefort and Celery Sandwiches
Peach Ice Cream
Fancy Cakes Coffee

CHICKEN SALAD

Dice five 12-ounce cans of chicken in fairly large pieces, dice eight cups celery in small pieces. Drain two No. 2 cans of stringless beans and slit lengthwise, add two 1lb-ounce cans drained diced carrots and marinate in one-half cup French dressing for an hour or so. Then add chicken, celery and one cup sliced sweet pickles and toss lightly together with six cups mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce, using five to six heads.

SALMON SANDWICHES

Combine the following ingredients: 1¼ tall cans of salmon or one tall can and one 7½-ounce can, six hard-cooked eggs, one tablespoon lemon juice, one-half cup chopped sweet pickle and one cup mayonnaise. Mix well. Spread between slices of buttered white bread and cut in halves or quarters. Makes fifty to sixty sandwiches cut in halve

Make a Dandy Out of Your Cellar

INSTEAD of a shoddy, uninviting spot, you may prepare and dandify your cellar so that it can meet your best friends without your experiencing a qualm. A simple way — which you may elaborate to suit, adding play equipment—is to enamel your steps and cellar floor a deep, leaf green. Paint the walls and ceiling oyster white, and the shelves may be a soft salmon color. Besides being decorative, your pipes (unless you go to the expense of concealing them) may be painted different colors so that one may be distinguished from the other in an emergency. For instance, red for the hot water pipe, green for the cold, yellow for the gas, and black for the electricity.

L' TRUSTEES' SEE SHARP DROP IN DEFICIT

Year Ending June 30 Expected to Be Best in Recent Years

A "substantial" reduction in the deficit of the Boston Elevated Railway for the year ending June 30, 1934, is forecast in the report of the trustees filed with the Legislature today.

The board bases its opinion on the financial betterment shown during the last six months of 1933, when the deficit was $472,321 less than in the same period of the preceding year.

A highlight of the report is the statement that the Elevated's financial health has been better since 1929 than that of companies in ten other large cities in the country with the exception of certain lines in New York City, which draw from large congested areas.

OPERATING COST CUT

Since March, 1933, there has been a decided improvement in the trend of riding, according to the report. In that month the number of revenue passengers using the company's lines was 14 per cent below normal. By December it was only 2 per cent below.

Operating costs for the calendar year of 1933 were the lowest since public control was instituted in 1918, accounting largely for the reduction in the deficit. The figure was $2,712,781.11 less than the operating expenses for 1932.

The deficit for the last six months of 1933 was $1,428,777.28, against $1,901,098.28 for the corresponding period of 1932.

STILL 2 MILLION TO GO

In 1933 the cost of service exceeded receipts by $2,247,930.36 and in 1932 by $2,569,445.45.

Total receipts for the calendar year of 1933 were $24,154,373.09, and for 1932, $26,428,493.63.

Against a loss in revenue in 1933 of $2,274,120.54, operating expenses were lowered $2,712,781.11.

The report contains no estimate of the probable deficit for the current trustee year which ends June 30.

WIFE HIDES IN DEATH QUIZ

Mrs. Venetta L. Scott, estranged wife of Hilton U. Scott, who was questioned by Boston police in Harrington, N. S, recently, in connection with the Maybelle Matheson murder in West Roxbury, has been brought here by her father, it was revealed today.

The father, Sylvanus E. Goodwin, a landscape gardener, revealed that he had gone to Nova Scotia and brought his daughter and four-year-old grandchild to this city Tuesday. He said he believed she was being harrassed and persecuted, and he had determined to bring her here where she would not be bothered.

For the past two days she and her daughter have been in seclusion in a West Newton st., South End, lodging house.

Goodwin admitted last night that his daughter was staying at the lodging house but refused to admit anyone to see her. He said he had journeyed to Nova Scotia for her last week and had returned here Tuesday.

He declared he would not even allow police to see her, if he could help it. He asserted there was no reason why she should be subjected to further questioning, inasmuch as she had already told all she knew concerning the Matheson case.

Discussing the case, he said:

"My daughter has been in a bad mess long enough. She has been harassed and persecuted with questions about the Matheson murder and the fact is that she knows nothing about it.

"I went to Nova Scotia to get her because I thought she had been suffering too much over something she knew nothing about. She is now home with me and I intend to keep her for the present at least."

LYNN MOTHER PRAYS FOR WARM SPRING MIRACLE

Traffic Czar Goes Conry

The silk "topper," pearl gray spats and knobby walking stick may be O. K. so far as Beacon st. is concerned but William P. "Billso" Hickey, new traffic commissioner, will give them the "go-by" when it comes to stepping out in "Dear Ol' Southie," the home town. "Billso" stepped out in the new regalia just for a photographer's benefit when this picture was snapped after his legislative colleagues presented the outfit to him. "It's all in fun," is "Billso's" message to the folks in "Southie." (Boston American Photo.)

Hickey Won't Wear Topper and Cane in Southie

Rep. William P. "Billso" Hickey, of South Boston, may have the sartorial accoutrements to rival his predecessor in the office of Boston traffic commissioner, but the facile vocabulary and the Mayfair manner belong only to the inimitable Joseph A. Conry.

Rep Hickey was the recipient of a silk topper, pearl gray spats, gray gloves, and a cane, draped with ribbon of St. Patrick's hue, from his colleagues in the House of Representatives, yesterday, the members apparently being unwilling to have one of their number partorially defeated by his predecessor.

"SOUTHIE" WAITING

The reaction of former Commr. Conry to this move to continue the splendor with which he decorated the office could not be learned. It would probably be a polysyllable assertion which could be literally translated, "Skip it."

And South Boston is holding its breath today It is not considered strictly au fait in that district for a resident to burst out in such splendor as spats, silk topper, gloves and a cane.

Not even a traffic commissioner of the City of Boston. The beautiful silk topper is likely to be the target of effervescent youths of the district. And the canes, as Rep. Hickey declared himself, would probably lead to the belief he had sprained his ankle.

POPULARITY MAY WIN

It is possible the popularity of the commissioner will allow him to escape unscathed despite his splendor.

But one shudders to think of the consequences should he ever dare to issue any of those fierce dictums, marked with obscure and lengthy words, which his predecessor delighted to hurl in the direction of his sorely beset foe, Police Commr. Hultman.

SEN. WHEELER BOOMS SILVER AS N. E. AID

Lauds Roosevelt and Fr. Coughlin; Sees Prosperity Ahead

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, with the light of a crusader blazing in his lively blue eyes, today warned the manufacturers of New England they must accept remonetization of silver if they are to recapture the markets of the world for their products.

President Roosevelt he described as a genuine, sincere and daring statesman "willing to smash any of the fogey precedents of the past in his overwhelming desire to restore prosperity and happiness to the American people."

Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, the famous radio priest of the Little Flower, was declared by Senator Wheeler to possess a devoted following in this country, exceeded only by the President of the United States himself.

Senator Wheeler spoke his thoughts frankly to the Boston Evening American in his rooms at the Boston City Club where tonight he will be given a dinner and will address a large audience on the campaign in which he has enlisted his aggressive ability, "The Remonetization of Silver."

"President Roosevelt, as I have seen him intimately," he said, "is equipped with high moral purpose, abundant physical strength and the courage of endowed statesmanship. He is determined to raise commodity prices in this country as the necessary basis for the return of true prosperity and he will set new precedents in his overpowering desire to achieve this purpose.

PUBLIC WITH HIM

"The country has confidence in him. In fact, he has the confidence of the country to an extent possessed by no man in my time. Congress will follow him, even blindly while this confidence exists.

"Father Coughlin has a tremendous audience. He is a masterful orator. The people believe in his honesty of purpose. More than any other man or any other force, he has swung both the country and the Congress itself to support of the Roosevelt ideals. Whether you accept his economics or not, you must concede his influence with the public mind.

Members of Congress from the East and Middle West tell me they are hemmed in by their constituents to follow Father Coughlin. The letters to them come very largely from members of the Protestant faith I know him personally and like him. He is bright, cheerful and amiable."

President Roosevelt's fixation of the gold dollar at 59.06 per cent will aid American export business Senator Wheeler said It will help credit slightly, he said. Otherwise its effects will not be of extensive importance, he believed.

HOPE FOR TEXTILES

"The country must remonetize silver If we are to secure prosperity and maintain it. Japan has run away with our foreign markets in the Orient, notably the textiles," Senator Wheeler added. "Her exports of textile fabrics to China, India and East India have increased several hundred percent. She and China and India have increased their spindles and looms by from 300 to 400 percent.

"We look upon New England as the textile center of this country. The textiles to you are a basic industry. You must regain your markets for these and other products that have been seized from us by the cheap currency nations.

"The remonetization of silver would permit the issuance of probably $500,000,000 of new currency, backed by silver. It would have an unappreciable effect upon our own currency. But it would raise the price of silver throughout the world. It would make your cost of manufacture more expensive abroad and would enable our own manufacturers to compete upon better terms.

DRIVE LEADERS SPUR WORKERS IN BOSTON

$150,000 Is Needed Every Day to Attain Emergency Goal

Goal	$4,500,000.00
To date	$1,703,647.53
Still needed	$2,796,332.47
Days to go	18

Despite substantial gifts from Boston business houses and their employes, Emergency Drive donations are falling short of the $150,000 a day quota that must be maintained if the goal of $4,500,000 is to be reached.

Outstanding among today's checks were two from the Gillette Safety Razor Co., one for $7,500, representing the firm's donation, and the other of $2,443 the contributions of employes

Employes of Sears, Roebuck & Co., sent $4,000; Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips contributed $1,500, and Stewart M. Patterson, $1,000

Many more of these gifts are needed, Drive authorities said today

Word of this situation was to be driven home to the hundreds of workers in the cause when they gather tonight in the Hotel Statler for a combined banquet-meeting at which leaders will tell of the vital necessity of putting the drive over the top so that Greater Boston may weather the tail-end days of the depression and emerge at the end of the year with the knowledge that the poor of the city received adequate protection and care.

Dr. Vannever Bush, vice-president of the Institute and dean of engineering, has been appointed assistant treasurer.

Henry E. Worcester, vice-president of the United Fruit Co., has been appointed to temporary membership on the executive committee. He repaces Gerard Swope, whose duties in the National Recovery Administration prevent his attendance.

Dr. Robert J. Van de Graaff is promoted from research associate in the department of physics to the rank of associate professor. This promotion comes in recognition of his notable work in electrostatics of which the development of the great electrostatic generator at the Institute's research station at Round Hill is one striking result

Women Plead for Abandoned Baby

The abandoned baby girl found in a North End hallway is destined to experience no difficulty in getting a home. It was reported today that more than a score of telephone messages had been received at City Hospital from women who wish to adopt the foundling.

Cross the labor standards in the silver-using nations of the world and enable them to become more extensive buyers of our own products."

Senator Wheeler does not "come out of the West" Like William Jennings Bryan, a stranger to the East in his crusade for the revalidation of silver He comes back home, for he is a native of Hudson, in this state. He visited his relatives there this afternoon. He is a candidate for re-election this Fall. The signs say he will be victorious.

Atty. Marshall Urges Law to End Ruinous Rivalry

The legal profession should organize under an NRA code to stop competition, on the advice of Wycliffe C Marshall Boston attorney

And he has put his belief into practice by enrolling himself under the National Recovery Act. The fact that he has no code isn't worrying him for the time being.

Marshall made this declaration today following a hearing before the legislative committee on legal affairs of four bills seeking to prevent banks and corporations from competing with attorneys. Unauthorized practice of law.

The bills were filed by Marshall the Bar Association of the city of Boston, Judge Nathan P. Avery, of the Hampden district court and the Massachusetts Bar Association.

"There are conditions of ruinous competition in the practice of law worse than any the NRA has cured," said Marshall in pleading for his measure. "Corporations should be forbidden to engage in legal practices; there should be individual responsibility. That applies also to the Legal Aid Society."

Introduced with Chairman Lomasney's name, the bills were suggested by Senator James Moran, of Maiden.

"Rhode Island lawyers come here and nobody objects," he said. "Let's give them a dose of their own medicine."

CRIPPLED TOT'S PLEA SENT TO ROOSEVELT

By EDWARD MARTIN

Perhaps the sympathetic heart of President Roosevelt will be touched when he reads today's mail and he will speed joy and happiness to the home of three-year-old Bobby Lamoureaux, of Ally st., Lynn

Bobby and the President have two things in common They were both born on January 30th, and like the President, Bobby almost constantly wears a hearty smile.

CHILD IS PARALYZED

And Bobby's mother and father, Mr and Mrs. Emmanuel Lamoureaux, hope some day to be able to boast that the President and their son have three things in common. That day will be when they can both say, "Bobby was once a victim of paralysis like the President."

Bobby, who is the only child of the couple, has been a sufferer of the dread disease since he was six months old Medical science has been unable to alleviate his condition.

For a time in the Lynn Hospital and then in a private hospital, but his condition remained unchanged. With family funds exhausted, Mr. and Mrs. Lamoureaux were ready to abandon hope of a cure for their boy. Then through the newspapers, they heard of the Warm Springs Foundation and the relief it had given President Roosevelt.

ARMS, LEGS USELESS

As little Bobby with his bright brown eyes and dark curly hair, combined with a broad smile, lay in his crib in the bedroom of the Lamoureaux home trying without success to lift one of the many toys his mother has bought him, a new hope crept into the mind of Mrs. Lamoureaux.

Bobby continued to try to lift and play with the toys surrounding him as the broken hearted mother, a tear trickling down her cheek, looked on with a sympathetic smile.

The child's body is that of any normal three-year-old child. But his arms and legs are useless

PLEA SENT WHITE HOUSE

While Mrs. Lamoureaux, because of the mental strain of her child's affliction and the lack of money to aid the tot, cries out her wishes to send little Bobby away to be cured an appeal is on its way to President Franklin D. Roosevelt in the little dobby of the Warm Springs Foundation to cure him of his malady.

ELY AIDE GOT PRISON-MADE FURNITURE, LABOR SAYS

Sec. Bradford Accused of Outfitting Law Office with Norfolk Equipment; Bacon Denies Trying to Stop Inquiry

Organized labor entered the Norfolk prison colony controversy today with a criticism directed at Robert B. Bradford, assistant secretary to Gov. Ely, following disclosures that Bradford obtained furniture for his private law office from the prison camp.

At the same time, Lieut Gov Gaspar G. Bacon, who shared with Bradford the unenviable distinction of being accused of interfering in the investigation of the colony, issued a statement denying he had taken an steps to obstruct the results of State Auditor Francis X Hurley's probe.

These developments came when state officials of both parties were making frantic efforts to establish contact with Gov Ely, who is on a West Indies cruise in an effort to silence Hurley and convert a pending expose of abominable conditions into a "dud."

Labor entered the broadside through Robert Watt, leader for the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, assailing Bradford's purchase of furniture from the colony, for a private law office he shared with Commissioner of Correction Frederick J. Dillon, Watt said:

"It is just another incident where prisoners are allowed to compete with free labor and where men with political pull are getting something for nothing.

"We have three bills now before the Legislature to prevent this very thing.

"I suppose you know that in some places, particularly in Quincy and Haverhill, people with political influence have no difficulty in getting their automobiles overhauled, their homes rewired and their plumbing and heating systems overhauled and put in shape by pupils from the vocational schools, the only expense to them being cost of the materials used.

"And I suppose you also know that certain persons of influence have had something like $35,000 worth of printing done at the Charlestown state prison."

NAMES UNDISCLOSED

He declined to say to whom he referred.

"There are two bills already introduced by the Federation," he said, "which, if passed, would curb these practices.

"We believe the labor and product of the prisons should be absorbed by the state. We are opposed to the right of any individual to deal with prison authorities in the purchase of prison-made products."

Lieut-Gov. Bacon, who was generally understood to be the "high Republican office-holder" Auditor Hurley accused of meddling, denied any interference, and denied he ever suggested an impartial committee of five to consider the Hurley report, a suggestion publicly made by Comm. Dillon when on Monday, he permitted Supt Howard B. Gill to withdraw from the prison administration.

DOESN'T KNOW GILL

He also denied that Prof. Henry A. Murray of Harvard, who made the same suggestion to Hurley in advance of Dillon's recommendation, was a relative although admitting he was related to his sister-in-law.

"I don't know Gill," said the lieutenant-governor. "I have never been to Norfolk, and I certainly never interfered in any way with any investigation.

"Prof. Murray isn't a relative of mine. He is a relative of my brother's wife. He told me he was going to see Hurley, but I don't know what suggestions he made to the state auditor.

"He is a professor of psychiatry at Harvard and is very interested in the work at Norfolk, so I assume he had a right to go to Hurley and make any suggestions he pleased, but I had nothing to do with the suggestions that a commission of five be appointed to study Mr. Hurley's report after it was made.

"I don't know anything about that. I interfered in no way."

Meantime Hurley was expected to comment on the transfer of Gill.

They include Clarence J. "Handsome Jack" Hapgood, robber, who worried himself into the good graces of Mrs. Gertrude L. Winslow, Newton social service worker, leading to the downfall of Supt. Howard B. Gill.

It was a letter from Mrs. Winslow to Gill, commenting on deletion of the attempted escape of Hapgood from his records, that brought the Norfolk probe to a climax.

Many of the "boys" in Charlestown and other institutions are wondering why Hapgood and pals wanted to escape from what Asst. Deputy Supt. Joseph G. Volpe has called "a country club."

Hapgood's fellow tunnel diggers, George Vas Hoff and Howard Davenport, have not been sent back to Charlestown as yet, but they are expected to be returned there. Also going back are those who participated in the Christmas and New Years disturbances that Gill said were no different from what might happen in any boys' school.

LINDBERGH MAY QUIZ SANKEY

FIND LINDBERGH FILE

Just how determined government agents are in their quest for information concerning any part Sankey may have had in the Lindbergh tragedy was indicated today when a federal investigator arrived here from New York and went immediately to the room where the kidnaper is being questioned.

A complete file of newspaper clippings on the Lindbergh kidnaping case, they said, was found in Sankey's ranch home.

POLICE GRILL GIRL

Undergoing the relentless questioning with the notorious self-confessed kidnaper and convict Helen Mattern, 23-year-old Milwaukee girl who was seized in Sankey's North Side apartment after his capture in a barber shop late yesterday.

Described "Public Enemy No. 1" of the United States, Sankey admitted only that he had had a part in the kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II., Denver broker, and Haskell Bohn, of St. Paul, son of the head of the Bohn Refrigerator Co.

From within occasionally could be heard the voices of the prisoners, Sankey's patient and resigned that of Miss Mattern tired and frequently hysterical. At intervals Sankey raised his voice in denials of accusations.

"I was the maid in the building," the girl said. "He told me that if I would live with him I wouldn't have to work."

It was two months ago, Helen said, that she quit her job to go with "Clark." She hadn't done anything, she kept telling the investigators. She didn't know anything. Never ha,d she hear,d the name of the desperado, Verne Sankey.

Here also the one-time rancher has maintained he had nothing to do with the Lindbergh tragedy, of which the kidnapings of Edward G. Bremer or William Hamm, Jr., both of St. Paul.

While during the progress of their inquisition in utmost secrecy, Department of Justice operatives said they considered Sankey's capture as vital to the Lindbergh case investigation.

BABE RUTH ON LIST

M. F. Kinkead, St. Paul County attorney, was on his way here today armed with evidence which may not only link Sankey with the Lindbergh abduction, but which also indicates that Sankey had contemplated kidnaping Babe Ruth, home-run king, and Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion, for ransome.

Captured here as he reposed in a barber chair, Sankey readily admitted the $60,000 abduction of Boettcher, wealthy Denver broker, and the $12,000 ransom abduction of Bohn of St. Paul.

Secrecy surrounded every move of the federal agents, and Sankey was kept out of reach of newspapermen throughout the rapidly moving investigation.

RANCH YIELDS CLUES

Prosecutor Kinkead said in St Paul before his departure that a search had waited Sankey's ranch in South Dakota and had found papers concerning the Lindbergh case, a picture of Babe Ruth and figures indicating the financial worth of both Ruth and Dempsey.

"The figures on Ruth and Dempsey were contained in a sort of record file," Kinkead said, "and the earnings of the men and the sources of their income where listed."

Kinkead also divulged that just prior to the Lindbergh kidnaping Sankey had made several long distance phone calls from St. Paul to New Jersey.

ASKS WRIT DELAY

Ransom notes sent by the kidnapers of Boettcher were in a similar handwriting to those dispatched to Col. Lindbergh, prosecutor Kinkead declared.

The St. Paul official came here seeking Sankey's extradition to Minnesota to stand trial for the Bohn kidnaping.

Melvin Purvis chief of the government men here, asked that Kinkead delay application until later so as not to interfere with the government's questioning of the desperado about the Lindbergh case.

The state of Colorado where Sankey is already under indictment also has telegraphed Purvis asking that Sankey be held for Colorado justice.

In Sankey's apartment hideout on the north side, federal agents found a small arsenal and $3,450 in currency.

His armament consisted of a submachine gun, a sawed-off shotgun and an automatic pistol. The currency was hidden in a tin box. Bills of $100 denomination made up $3,000 of the cash.

None of the bills found in his apartment was identified as part of Lindbergh money, police say.

Three Federal agents and three Chicago police officers seized Sankey as he lay back in the barber shop of William Mueller to have a four days' growth of beard removed.

Sankey explained that his beard was due to a recent bit of surgery he underwent for the removal of three moles on his face. These had served as one of his most prominent marks of identification. The operation had made his face so sore he could not shave, Sankey explained.

Trapped by police and federal agents in a Chicago barber shop yesterday, Verne Sankey, long sought on kidnaping charges, surrendered without a struggle. Sankey, police say, admits kidnaping Charles Boettcher, II, of Denver, and Haskell Bohn of St. Paul, but denies any part in the Lindbergh abduction.

Keith Memorial Reports Deficit

The preliminary statement of profit and loss for the year ending Dec. 31, 1933, released by the Keith Memorial Theater Corporation shows a net operating loss of $202,132.75 for that period.

Total income amounted to $741,173.29 but the expenditures over the same period aggregated $943,486.04.

OIL MAN IS HELD IN CODE CASE

First indictments in this district for alleged violation of an NRA code were faced in federal court today by the Albany Oil Co., Inc., of Boston and its president manager and treasurer, William Lyndon of Everett.

"Each offence committed," the indictment reads, "was committed wilfully, knowingly and unlawfully, in violation of Article 5, Rule 2 of the Code of Fair Competition for the Petroleum Industry . . . of the act of Congress known as the National Recovery Act."

ICE OUT, CAPE CANAL OPENS

Woods Hole, Feb. 1 (AP)—Although the Cape Cod Canal was open to navigation today after being sealed by ice yesterday, officers of Coast Guard Base 18 here warned that with the turn of the evening tide the southwest wind probably would again jam the waterway with floe ice.

Sankey Reward Set at $9000

A total of $25,000 was posted by Claude K. Boettcher, wealthy Denver broker, following the abduction of his son, Charles Boettcher, II, from his home here a year ago for $60,000 ransom.

A committee appointed by Mayor George D. Begole of Denver allocated $10,000 to persons who aid in the capture of Carl W. Pearce and Arthur Younger, now serving sentences in Federal prison for their part in the crime.

The remaining $15,000 was divided, $9000 to be paid for the capture of Sankey and $6000 for the apprehension of Boettcher, the only member of the gang still at large.

Blue Eagle Soon to Be Replaced

Washington, Feb. 1 (AP)—The Blue Eagle, most publicized bird in America, is soon to have an offspring that may become more widely known than the original.

With a majority of industries already under codes or about to enter that state, the NRA is drawing the designs for a new bird to be displayed by all manufacturing code signers.

The new eagle will be more original than the old in that each manufacturer will be given a registration number for his bird. Each such insignia reproduced on labels or displayed elsewhere thus will identify the displayee by number.

Such a method is to be followed as one means of insuring code compliance. The bird and registration number will be withdrawn if violations are proved.

N. J. Police Shake Dust From Lindy Records

By DAVID P. HENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 1 (INS) — Dust was blown off the unsolved Lindbergh baby kidnaping case which occurred two years ago, as a possible link was considered today between the famous abduction mystery and Verne Sankey, notorious mid-western kidnaping expert, arrested in Chicago.

"We are waiting until we hear from Chicago," said Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel, deputy superintendent of New Jersey State police, who took an important part in the Lindbergh investigation. "We would like to question Sankey on the Lindbergh kidnaping."

Schoeffel said he had not heard whether Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the kidnaped and murdered baby, would go to Chicago.

CALLS ARE TRACED

He would not discuss details of the telephone calls from Sankey to New Jersey points recorded in the first few months of 1932. The Lindbergh kidnaping took place on the night of March 1 at the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J. It was tracing of these calls by federal agents which first listed Sankey a suspect.

Schoeffel revealed the handwriting used in the original ransom notes sent to Lindbergh had been compared with the handwriting sent by the kidnapers of Charles K. Boettcher II., wealthy Denver broker. Sankey admitted staging the Boettcher abduction.

Schoeffel declined to say [redacted] handwriting used in the two cases were similar.

HOUSES RAIDED

During the nation-wide hunt for the Lindbergh kidnapers, clues were investigated in Western and Northern states where Sankey usually operated.

The watchdog of the Lindbergs was taken sick several days before the kidnaping and removed to a hospital. It was conjectured, at the time, that the dog had been poisoned deliberately by the kidnapers.

PILLS ARE FOUND

The finding of poison pills in Sankey's clothing when he was arrested suggested they might have been used for other purposes than suicide.

Absence of clues to the contrary, detectives were inclined to believe the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby worked alone, with only one accomplice.

Sankey, in his general criminal operations, was known as a "lone wolf." When a kidnaping job called for associates he operated with a small, compact organization.

ALL-STAR RADIO GROUP SURROUNDS RUDY

By N. F. T.

After a few weeks of not the best brand of broadcasting or even nearby so, the "Hymer" of radioland named Rudy pops back this evening to present what should again measure up to the standard of those splendid variety "mike" shows, as established by himself during his Thursday night hours (WEEI) between 8 and 9 o'clock Mr. Vallee seemed to have had his program in what the baseball scribes would declare a batting slump, due to his trip to California perhaps, where talent quotations comes high. However, tonight will bring the listeners a typical all-star Vallee program. Among those taking part will be Lenore Ulric, dramatic actress above par, Judith Anderson, also an out of the ordinary footlight personality, Julius Tannen, funnier by far than most professional comedians, along with the "Eddie and Ralph" song and story team.

MEDAL FOR MEDAL

They are giving Paul Whiteman a bronze medal this evening (WEEI) during his musical half-hour and it's for distinguished service to radio, having directly to do with his "Rhapsody in Blue" composition. Thats from 10 until 10:30 p. m.

Dan Hickey starts a new Yankee Network series (WNAC) to be heard each Thursday evening hereafter at 7:30 and labeled, "The Science of Being," being designed especially to emphasize the human angle in successful salesmanship.

Old-time darky songs of early Mississippi River steamboat days will feature the weekly "Showboat" staging tonight (WEEI) at 9 o'clock with all the southern tunes as "Alabamy Bound" and "Waitin' for the Robert E. Lee" included.

High school chappies and gals are holding forth (WEZ) for a 15-minute program tomorrow morning (8:30 to 8:45) in the Hotel Bradford studios of WBZ. This period is usually held in the big Frank A. Day junior high school of Newtonville, as part of the regular class procedure, planned under the direction of faculty member, Alden Read.

Terry Resumes His Oafish Character With Journalists ↑ Study of Singular Bluntness of Giants' Young Manager ↓

By AUSTEN LAKE

THERE have been brief attempts by the house staff of the New York Giants to humanize young Mr. Will Terry by painting him over with jollity and trying to sell him back to the journalists as one who, under his prond crust, really loves his fellow man with warmth and cordiality. But the journalists, who know Will as a cold man with a naturally morbid disposition and a lofty disdain of the press, would not buy him back. And after a few futile efforts to give the boys dinners and appear at their rallies, Terry was allowed to lapse back to his native waspishness and to nurse his dark moods.

So, as the New York newsmen prepare to stage their annual biscuit toss, Terry is leaving for Memphis without bothering to answer their invitation or explain that his gasoline business is really in a critical period just now and much as he regrets, etc. No, Will up and lammed off without bandying words, pausing only to throw a slur at the Brooklyn club before heaving his luggage on the Orange Blossom Special. Which was his privilege, as well as being jake with the journalists.

I am at a loss to explain Terry—not his disinclination to woo the press, mind you, because there are many distinguished sportsmen who harbor secret disdain for newsmen, some of whom are noisy, disorderly types, given to cadging and chiseling—but for his oafish attitude toward his own good fortune. Because public personalities are built by repetition in the newsprints, and the more lineage the bigger the illusion, so that often men with small gifts are inflated to public importance far exceeding their natural talents.

Blondy Ryan Says He Has Another Side

BUT Terry's attitude is one that holds journalists as a kind of human blue bottle fly, fit only for tanglefoot paper or to be swatted with snubs. I have suspected sometimes that this is an adopted pose, similar to the churlishness by which George Bernard Shaw courts public curiosity or the shrinking reticence with which Greta Garbo woos the mystery that is her chief charm. But then I always recall that Terry was a surly, rebellious character when he was only a lay member of the Giants and before a stockholder's revolution turned John McGraw out and him in, so that Bill would stalk around with a perpetual pout and a look of heavy sorrow, waving camera men aside with the growl, "I've been photographed before."

Among the few times that I have seen him trying to fraternize was after the first game of the last World Series in New York, when he appeared in the press tap-room and sipped gingerly from a frosted glass of plain wichy, making growly comments in a coroner's voice and sometimes warping his lips into a wry grin. And once he gave a laugh in a cold shudder that just missed being a cough. That was when the Giant's house staff was trying to paint him over the jollity.

Well, I am afraid that Terry is one of my favorite sport characters for the reason that whatever his ideals may be, he has confidence in them. And I am assured by Blondy Ryan that he has his softer side, embodying a fatherly tolerance for his men and a recognition of their professional intelligence that John McGraw never had. For, where John ran the Giants on a reform school plan, reserving all acts of initiative for himself and locking his men in cells at night, Terry shares his counsel with the field hands, is free with praise and permits imbibing of beers, both light and dark, placing the only test of a man's sobriety on his fitness in the ball yard. He is, in short, the type that a soldier would recognize as a good top-sergeant, swift to administer rough and smooth justice, kindly and inexhorable in turns.

Terry's Understanding Made Ryan

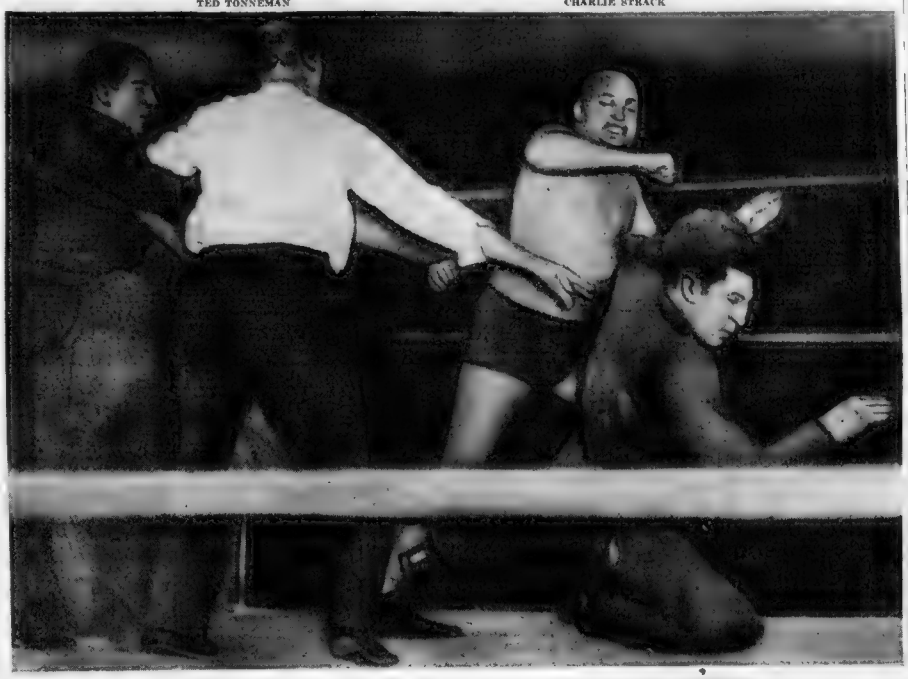
I HAVE often watched Blondy stroll with a cub's cheerful impertinence into those mound conferences that Terry sometimes held with faltering pitchers last season, and have wondered, as the angular lad thrust his nose into those parleys, that Terry did not shoo him away with the air of a master chiding the unwitting impudence of a faithful hound. But Terry always let Blondy have his little say at these times, frequently giving him a neighborly pat.

Yet I am certain that McGraw would have rebuked the boy and sent him about his business, probably blighting his confidence and sapping his dash. I doubt, in fact that Blondy's sensitive puppy nature would have thrived under McGraw, who would likely have packed him off to some leaky roof league early in the season.

It is hard to reconcile Terry's neighborliness to his men with the wish to make journalists feel their own impotence, except that he may have been miffed last season when the New York reporters guessed him out of a pennant, and is now paying them off by refusing to eat their banquet. But for that matter the experts guessed the Braves out of the first division, a lot of harmless nonsense which is not keeping Judge Fuchs and Bill McKechnie from stopping in to sup. No! It is just that young Will is a solitary character who refuses to make love to the journalists, whom he regards as a kind of human blue bottle fly fit only for tanglefoot paper or to be swatted by snubs.

Strack on War Path Without Paint or Feathers

TED TONNEMAN — CHARLIE STRACK



EARL TOMKINS

Charlie Strack is without his N. E. heavyweight title today. He lost the crown to Al Mercier last night in the most hectic mat bout seen in Boston in many a year. It was fortunate for Charlie that police interceded after Mercier was declared the winner for hundreds of howling mat fans were ready to step in. Earl Tomkins, Strack's chief second, felt the wrath of the Oklahoma bad boy. Photo above shows Tomkins hitting the dust

BUSHNELL PUTS NASH ON SPOT

That school athletics at Malden high may be taken out of the hands of the faculty, which has had full charge for many years, and turned over to the school committee, to be handled by a subcommittee of that body, is the proposal which is advocated by Edward J. Bushell, member of the school board.

Charging that Faculty Manager Fred J. Nash had handled school athletics in a high handed manner, Bushell submitted his proposal but was prevailed upon to table the matter until consideration could be given to it in detail.

Committeeman Bushell charged that the athletic association took in over $22,000 in receipts from football, paid out over $14,000 and turned over $7,000 to the Field corporation and that the school committee has absolutely no say in anything governing either the finances or management of teams.

He charged that some contracts were made for several years in advance and that Malden's football schedule for next year was the most difficult schedule ever played by Malden. He pointed out that neither the coaches or school committee were consulted as to the Malden schedule.

Referee Suspended

Montreal, Feb. 1 (INS)—Charles Dinsmore, National Hockey League referee, had been indefinitely suspended today by Frank Patrick, managing director of the league. The suspension was due to "inefficient refereeing" in a game the Montreal Maroons won from the New York Americans, 2 to 1, last Saturday. The Americans protested

Police Quell Riot as Strack Loses N. E. Diadem to Mercier

By JACK CONWAY

Al Mercier stripped Charley Strack of his title as heavyweight wrestling champion of New England at the Arena in a bout that was featured by the wildest riot staged at a mat show here in two years.

Strack, 220 pounds of fighting bone and flesh, was the center of the storm that broke loose after Mercier had scored the first fall of the match with his famous drop kick in 24m. 29s.

Just before the unexpected toss Strack was warned by Referee Ted Tonneman against the use of the strangle hold. The referee broke Charley's grip around Mercier's neck.

Strack turned his head and protested against Tonneman's actions. Like a bolt out of the blue Mercier shot in the air and crashed his feet against his opponent's chest. Strack hit the canvas with a heavy thud, and was pinned.

STRUCK IN RAGE

Earl Tomkins, Strack's chief second, rushed into the ring, and before he could decide what he intended to do was nailed by one of Charley's sweeping right hand punches. Mercier stepped into the jam and was showered by blows tossed by Strack.

The 4500 fans in the Arena were in an uproar, and hundreds of them surged around the ring.

Sergeant Buzan of the Back Bay station, supported by Patrolmen Moore and Cullitey, fought their way through the human wall thrown around the ring, and climbed into the battle zone. The two patrolmen pushed Mercier into a corner, and Sergeant Suzan grabbed Strack. Order was restored inside the ropes.

"Gentleman" Jack Washburn, the center of many a riot, was in a ringside seat and laughed as some of the fans tried to take a punch at Strack.

"Its good to see somebody other than myself in the well known middle," said Washburn.

MERCIER BUTTS STRACK

When wrestling was resumed, Strack kicked Mercier through the ropes. Al stood up outside of the ropes and Strack waited to tip him over, Mercier dove between the top and second ropes. His head crashed against Strack's stomach and the latter hit the canvas.

Mercier later dropped Strack with a flying body scissors. He tried to repeat with the same weapon of attack, and met disaster. Strack was set for Mercier, gripped his opponent's thighs, and sent him flying backwards to the canvas for a fall. The time was 13m. 36s.

Mercier won the title with a drop kick. The suddenness of the kick surprised Strack. Charley was stunned when his head hit the canvas. The time was 6m. 7s.

DEMETROFF WINS

Boris Demetroff proved that Jim Londos isn't the only Greek who knows how to wrestle when he won from the rugged Gene Ledoux of Canada in 13m. 14s. with a head over shoulder chancery.

Charley Metro of Boston used an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam to knock off Joe Anthony of New York in 8m. 18s.

Al Vantres of this city won from Lieut. O'Dell of England in 11m 47s., using a giant swing to gain the victory toss.

George Myerson retained his title as world's middleweight champion when he crashed Tarzan Taylor to defeat in 12m. 38s. with a shoulder roll. George Saunders of New Orleans and Jack Sires of New York were on even terms after 20 minutes of milling.

John Spellman of Providence was too rough for Nick Skotis and scored a fall in 8m. 45s. Spellman used a flying tackle to win.

Quinn to Drop Stripp, Wilson and Wright

Brooklyn, Feb. 1 (AP)—Thirty-three players are on the list issued today by the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Baseball League for the training trip to Florida, 11 of them making the journey South for the first time in Brooklyn livery.

The players will report to Manager Max Carey at Orlando March 4 and two weeks later begin a24-game exhibition schedule which will end, as usual, with a two-game series with the New York Yankees April 14 and 15.

Although Joe Stripp, Hack Wilson, Glenn Wright and Jake Flowers all are on the roster, it appeared improbably they would make the trip south.

Bob Quinn, Brooklyn business manager, said none of the quartet had been sent contracts.

"A pretty good guesser," he added, "might draw the conclusion that you don't sign up players you intend to trade."

Babe Ruth Waved Back to Sick Bed

New York, Feb. 1—Babe Ruth has been chased back to bed to recover from an attack of grippe. A couple of days ago he was allowed to roam around his apartment but Dr. Oswald La Rotonda has sent him back to the blankets to rest.

British 12-Metre Defi Declined

New York, Feb. 1 (INS)—The North American Yacht Racing Union's International 12-metre cup will remain in storage for at least another year. The Royal London Yacht Club's challenge today had been gracefully declined. Reason? Lack of cash to build a new defender.

Mrs. Wightman Hears From Mrs. Moody

By WALTER KILEY

Prospects that Mrs. Helen W. Moody, former queen of the women's courts, would return to active competition during the approaching season were suggested considerably today with the receipt of a highly optimistic letter from the Californian by Mrs. George W. Wightman of Brookline, several times former national women's champion.

Mrs. Moody, who suffered a sprained back just previous to the Wightman cup matches at Forest Hills last August which forced her to default in the final of the national championships to Miss Helen Jacobs, did not commit herself on the subject of her immediate return to the game.

INJURY HEALS FAST

Her father added the remark that Mrs. Moody's back had been recently X-rayed and was straighter than at any time since the injury was first sustained more than six months ago.

Mrs. Wightman, however, was not quite so certain that Mrs. Moody would be able to play actively this season.

It takes a long time to get back in condition after being laid up as long as Mrs. Moody," stated Mrs. Wightman. "I don't feel that she can come back so soon or that she can get her game sufficiently tuned up to her old time perfection. However, I think that Mrs. Moody will be back again next year."

Mrs. Moody's letter, written from her San Francisco home, follows in part:

"I feel that I am making rapid progress. I notice a decided improvement and am feeling ever so much better. The last two weeks, especially, have convinced me that I am forging ahead with great strides.

"I only wish that I was feeling as husky as I used to, but I hope to be that way soon. However, I feel greatly encouraged.

"For the time being I am taking things easy, permitting myself no chances and following out the doctor's orders to the letter. He says that I must have plenty of rest and that is just what I am doing."

20,000 FANS SEE LONDOS WIN

Savoldi who toppled the New York and Philadelphia wrestling crown from Londos was no match for the former champion, who administered a real old fashioned tanning to the Irish football star.

Savoldi jumping and grimacing, brought the huge throng to its feet during the early part of the match by rushing Londos around the ring, butting him with the flying tackle and punishing him with a headlock. Londos recovered quickly and went to work and finished Savoldi as he pleased.

Londos outweighed Savoldi 198 to 185 pounds.

Gross receipts for the match were placed at $32,000, the largest in Chicago's wrestling. The vast stadium was crowded to its concrete rafters. Thousands were turned away from the outer gates.

KICKING GAME PLANNED FOR 1934 YALE GRID TEAM

Torrington, Conn., Feb. 1 (INS) Fundamentals of football will be the stepping stones on which Raymond "Ducky" Pond, new Yale head coach, plans to build a powerful team at New Haven thus fall to meet the toughest Eli schedule in history, Pond told International News Service here today.

"Make no mistake about it," Pond said. "We have no illusions about that schedule. Columbia and Penn, only two of the eight teams we'll meet, are going to be hard nuts to crack, and the rest aren't pushovers.

"I regard a thorough-going knowledge of football fundamentals, as thorough that blocking, tackling, charging and the like come as second natures to the players, absolutely essential if te are going to win from or even hold Columbia and Penn.

KICKING GAME PLANNED

"On the question of offense, I prefer to wait until later in spring practice before saying much about that. However, you can quote me as saying that kicking is going to play a mighty important part in our offense, and we're going to train some good kickers."

Pond said he expected a good crop of "youngsters" from last season's freshman squad and pointed to the fact he will have a "good working nucleus" from the varsity squad of 1933 since most of the players on teams that season were undergraduates.

He was unwilling to criticise mistakes made by Reggie Root or by Mal Stevens in preceding years other than to say

"I do feel that fundamentals were not stressed enough to develop players capable of meeting and holding their own against the type of team usually found on a Yale schedule. There were many occasions when a little more training on the rudiments of the game would have prevented obvious and almost foolish mistakes.

INJURIES MAIN WORRY

"If we get half a break on injuries I think we have a pretty fair chance of making a good showing this fall," Pond said. "You know, I am convinced injuries hurt us more last fall than any other single factor."

Pond, hero of Yale victories over Harvard in 1923 and 1924, appeared well pleased with Athletic Director Malcolm Farmer's selection of Earle "Greasy" Neale of West Virginia as backfield coach, Denny E. Myers of the same school as line coach and Ivan B. Williamson of Michigan, protege of Harry Kipke's, as end coach, despite the fact they are "outsiders."

"With a fair share of luck, a few good breaks and no end of hard drill, we'll turn out a Yale team of merit this fall," he concluded.

ROSENBLOOM'S TITLE GO OFF

Miami, Fla., Feb. 1 (INS)—The Maxie Rosenbloom-Joe Knight boxing bout for the light heavyweight championship of the world was postponed here today, when Madison Square Garden officials protesting the affair looked up at the soggy skies above the city and decided that they were too threatening.

The bout will be held Monday if Clear weather is not expected before Friday. Knight, the challenger is scheduled to fight the champion for 15 rounds.

PROPOSE NEW ATHLETIC FIELD FOR SOMERVILLE HIGH

MAYOR HAGAN FOSTERING NEW MOVE

By BILL CONNELL

A new modern school sports stadium for Somerville high school teams at Dilboy Field will become a reality if present plans are successful. The project would be a Public Works Administration development.

The work would include demolishment of the old concrete stands on the Alewife Brook Parkway side of the field and construction of modern stands, grading of the field where necessary, and possibly a new cinder track.

At the January meeting of the Somerville school committee, Mayor James E. Hagan of Somerville informed the members of the board that he planned to take up with the PWA authorities in Washington, the authorization for the stadium construction as a PWA project.

HELP UNEMPLOYED

If the request were granted it would provide work for a large number of men and at the same time effect a big improvement in the facilities of the city for children's health and recreation.

The matter came up after Mayor Hagan introduced an order that three members of the committee investigate possibilities of selling cafeteria privileges in the school of the city, with the income from the concession sale to go to athletics.

The present condition of the school sports treasury being low, Mayor Hagan said he wished to investigate ways and means for raising funds to help out the situation.

The order to investigate concession sale possibilities then was unanimously passed.

Mayor Hagan told the committee that interest in athletics in the city had fallen off during the past few years. He blamed this in part on the poor accomodations for spectators at Dilboy Field.

He stated that his idea was not to build championship teams as a money-making proposition. But the thought was to improve conditions at Dilboy Field, with the resultant interest in good clean sports a great benefit to the health and morals of the youngsters of the city.

Facilities at Dilboy Field have hurt attendance at many games, particularly during the football season. In the last few years the high school baseball and football teams have reached such heights under the coaching of Charley Dickerman that large crowds have been attracted to the games.

ROPES HAVE FAILED

Often the stands have been filled and the overflow hundreds have been forced to rim the playing field. Ropes have failed to hold the crowds back despite efforts of the police, so that hundreds of fans have encroached on the playing field, hindering and causing games to be suspended while the field was cleared.

Cubs Boss Fuels Up for New Can-Am Toil

When there's work ahead nothing helps as much as good food, so Manager Hitchman of the Bruin Cubs proceeds to fuel up. Mrs. Hitchman accompanies him as the pair hop to a restaurant before attending a Boston play.

CHANGE IN ICE PLAYOFF RULE IS PROPOSED

By BILL GRIMES

Since "hookie" was conceived by the Indians the medicine men have performed no many operations and transfusions that it is just miracle the game has survived.

Now, there is a movement underway to eliminate all teams from play-offs that lose more games than they win. The American hockey public has never been able to understand a condition whereby a club that finished third over a 48-game schedule could come through and win the Stanley Cup which is emblematic of the world's professional championship.

Mike Rodden, the veteran referee, stepped up with the "win more than you lose or stay out of the play offs" idea.

RODDEN KNOWS HOCKEY

The weather beaten Miguel Rodden has been knocking around hockey for so many years that it has become a habit for him to pass the time mulling over hockey remedies

Rodden firmly believes that drastic measures should be taken to eliminate tie games. He is of the opinion that if the N. H. L. adopted his suggestion that teams would open up realizing that tie games would not help materially. At present, 20 per cent of the games played in the National Hockey League have been no decision affairs, and the fans, especially those on the side of the border, are up in arms over the unsatisfactory conditions.

Since the N. H. L. expanded to two divisions, clubs have reached the play offs, after losing more games than they won.

HOCKEY DIFFERENT

Hockey is the only major sport that permits a loser to compete for the world's championship. Such a condition is not prompted by any desire to promote sportsmanship. Instead, it is an out-and-out money proposition.

The nine National Hockey League clubs play a 48 game schedule to eliminate three contenders. Why should any team that has lost more games than it has won expect the fans to lend their support for a championship playoff series?

At the present stage of the N. H. L. race, the Toronto Maple Leafs are the only club in the Canadian division with an average of better than .500 but Rangers, Chicago and Detroit are in the "black."

Under the Rodden system, there would be less jockeying and the fans would get a better line on the real ability of the respective teams. From now on, there will be many instances of teams playing for position, which is bad business, despite the fact that in some quarters it is classified as master minding.

There is not a club in the American Division that is anxious to tackle Toronto in a best three out of five series. The preference is to engage two home and home series and then take on the Leafs.

Hockey is undergoing changes annually and will eventually be straightened out, if the powers that be lend an ear to such authorities as Mike Rodden, who has devoted his life to the game, as a player, coach, scout and referee.

EVERS' CAREER PROVES BOYS HAVE CHANCE

By JOE CASHMAN

Just in case any of the promising rookies found by the Boston Evening American for the Braves feel that they're too young, small or inexperienced to fill the lofty baseball berths being held open for them by Judge Fuchs, we would give them the career of Johnny Evers, one of the judges in the contests which uncovered the talent.

The Tribal scout started out lacking every quality looked for in a ball player, except courage. He wasn't a contest winner. He was without a single booster. He had to wiggle his lantern jaw plenty to convince his first boss that he was applying for a job as a player and not as a bat boy.

Little wonder.

Troy John was still in his 'teens He wasn't known beyond the confines of his favorite back lot. He had no experience. His weighed less than 100 pounds.

Yet within a year after his most unsuspicious debut, the Evers boy, now tipping the scales at 105, was in the majors to stay for a dozen years and gain fame with the famous old Chicago Cubs and miracle Braves as one of the greatest second basemen in the history of the game.

RODE WITH BAGGAGE

His first Spring with the Cubs, he used to be tossed up with the baggage on top of the caravan used to transport the players.

He'd fight his weight in wildcats then, as now, but he knew it would be the height of folly to protest.

Selee finally wired the home office explaining the situation.

"Bring Evers back to Chicago and we'll take care of him," was the reply.

Johnny's grit carried him back to the Windy City. Before anybody could take care of him, he had taken care of himself. The race wasn't a week old before an injury to a regular forced him into the lineup. He was a regular thereafter.

HOW CAN THEY MISS?

"Every one of the 500 entries in the Boston Evening American's contest," says the Cubs' ivory-hunter, "is a far more promising prospect than I appeared to be when I broke in. As for the winners, I don't see how they can fail to make the grade. They're big, strong, fast and intelligent. They'll have their older mates pulling for instead of against them. All they need is coaching.

If after that speech any of the winners aren't willing to mortgage the old homestead that they'll make good with the Braves, it was a mistake to pick them.

LAYDEN STARTS GRID DUTIES

South Bend, Feb. 1 (AP)—Elmer Layden sat down at Knute Rockne's famous old desk under the golden dome today and began his active campaign to bring football back to its former glory in the football world.

Back on the grounds where he gained fame as fullback on the immortal "Four Horsemen" eleven, Layden officially took charge of Notre Dame's athletic destinies as director of athletics and head football coach. No ceremonies were held with his induction to office, although two weeks ago he was given a tumultuous reception at the annual football banquet.

Layden, who won national renown as a football player under the late Rockne, and a reputation as a fine football coach at Duquesne University, brought one new assistant with him as he took over the offices previously held by Jess Harper and Heartly "Hunk" Anderson. The newcomer was Joe Boland, who played on Notre Dame's football teams in 1925 and 1926 and who will be Layden's chief gridiron assistant.

Tom Conley, captain of the undefeated 1930 team, was the only survivor of the 1933 football coaching staff, being retained as end coach. One more assistant, to be named later, will be hired

Working with Layden in other departments were George Keogan, basketball coach, and John Nicholson, track mentor. They are the only members of the entire coaching staff who are not Notre Dame graduates. Keogan coming from Minnesota and Nicholson from Mississippi.

George Blake Looked After His Boys Like a Hen With a Brood | But Bad Luck Ruined the Best Boxers He Ever Handled

By Jack Kofoed

George Blake would have given Diogenes an easy time of it had the latter been poking around in the fight game in search of an honest man. As a matter of pure fact George is so square that even the chiselers would let him referee a bout in which one of his own fighters was a contestant.

Some years ago Blake developed the greatest of all amateur boxing teams for the Los Angeles Athletic Club. It consisted of Fidel LaBarba, Jackie Fields, Ralph Smith, Johnny Brannigan, Joe Salas, Hughie Macdonald, Charley Jenkisson, August Gotto and Julius Jessick.

A malignant fate camped on the trail of these young men . . a relentless fate that kept battering them from start to finish. Not one was lucky.

Brannigan, who now runs a health farm, was in to see me the other day, and recited the trials and tribulations of his teammates. LaBarba, a handsome, curly haired kid, won the bantamweight championship, but ruined his eyes in the process. So did Jackie Fields, who became welterweight title holder. Their vision is so bad that eventually they may become totally blind

Jack Dempsey can tell you how good the gigantic Ralph Smith looked in the early days. I know Blake had high hopes that some day the big fellow would succeed the Manassa Mauler as champion of the world. Ralph took extraordinary care of himself. His life touched no woman's except his mother's. He didn't drink or smoke or stay out late . . . and knocked his rivals out as fast as Blake dug 'em up.

Of course, there was little money for him, and to keep going, Smith joined the Los Angeles fire department. On the very first alarm he answered, the engine crashed headlong into a street car. Ralph suffered internal injuries. His manager insisted that the big fellow quit boxing entirely when he finally hobbled out of the hospital . . . but Smith returned to the game under another skipper. He was hopelessly bad. There was no chance for him, and he absorbed numerous beatings.

"The last time I saw Ralph," said Johnny Brannigan, "was the night Benny Bass fought Dominick Petrone at the St. Nicholas. He was just a battered hulk of the fine boy I had known . . . and was selling shoe laces to earn enough for a meal and a bed in a flop house."

Then there was Hughie Macdonald. I think George Blake will agree that Mac was the greatest amateur fighter of all time. He had something on the ball . . . speed, skill and a punch. He served in the war, and was badly shell-shocked. He came back home a white faced ghost, frail as a suckly child and with ribs protruding through the skin. The doctors said he must live outdoor on a farm in the open air and eschew all excitement. But Macdonald couldn't do that. Excitement was in his blood. He won the middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight championships of the Coast before collapsing.

Again I quote Brannigan: "I went to see him in the hospital. He lay there just a bag of bones, speechless, staring up at me with his big blue eyes. The club shipped him home to Boston . . . but he died on the way."

Little August Gotto also came under the black ban. He was injured in a bout . . . and died on the operating table afterward.

Fate Held Field Day

You see Fate had a protracted field day at the expense of the team . . George Blake developed . . . Macdonald and Gotto dead . . . Smith selling shoe laces to ward off starvation . . . LaBarba, Fields and Brannigan suffering from eye trouble. As for Salas, Jenkinson and Jessick, they never went anywhere in particular so far as the boxing game was concerned . . . but whether or not they suffered misfortune I don't know.

It wasn't Blake's fault, certainly. No man ever fathered a group more carefully than he. It was never his idea to rush a boy into action too fast. He was extremely conservative. He would work with a youngster for months and months before even permitting him to engage in amateur bouts. Blake never was one of your money-mad managers. The welfare of his proteges came before any such consideration. But no matter how careful he was he couldn't protect them from the bludgeons Fate wielded.

George, for all his mildness could whip any fighter he ever handled. He was a marvel with the gloves, and had the knack of imparting his knowledge to others. And no manager ever set a better example than he did.

One night in the Los Angeles Athletic Club a manager was complaining because another skipper had stolen a fighter away from him. He cursed and appealed to high heaven concerning the injustice of his case. Blake listened quietly, and then said:

Aplied Golden Rule

You've got no kick. If you had lived a clean life yourself you wouldn't have lost him. You've been chasing around all the joints in town with blondes, trying to drink up every bottle of Scotch you could lay your hands on. You've cheated and cheated. I don't know a time when you've been on the level. No wonder you lost him."

The other manager listened, goggle-eyed. There was nothing he could say, for George had spoken the truth, and there was no use trying to resent what Blake had said . . . not fistically at any rate.

Managers are supposed to be the fly in the ointment so far as the boxing game is concerned . . . but among them are some who are grand people with whom even Diogenes would pal around. Blake, as I have pointed out at some length, is one. Ike Dorgan, my old golfing partner, is another.

Jimmy Bronson and a number of others rate with this select group. But even these honest souls can't ward off the slings of Fate . . . and keep some ot there boys from winding up back of the eight ball.

Venzke May Turn to Two-Mile Run

New York, Feb. 1 (AP)—Gene Venzke, University of Pennsylvania sophomore who holds the world indoor mile record of 4.10, may abandon his favorite event in favor of the two-mile run after Saturday's clash with Glenn Cunningham in the Millrose games.

Venzke has delayed entering the Baxter mile at the New York A. C. games Feb. 17 until after Saturday's race. If beaten he may concentrate on the longer distance.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Joe Knight, "Pride of Dixie," will carry plenty of money when he steps to the post to battle for Maxie Rosenbloom's world's light heavyweight title in a 15-round bout at the Garden Bowl at Miami, Fla., on Monday. Knight has taken the place in the heart of Southern boxing fans that was formerly held by the colorful "Young" Stribling.

Rosenbloom will receive a guarantee of $15,000 for Monday's bout, which gives you some idea of what kind of a drawing card Knight is considered in Miami. Rosenbloom and Knight, in Boston, would be doing well if it drew $5,000.

Eddie Mack showed Knight in this city a couple of years ago. He paid Joe $100 Knight has come a long way since then, but may not get much more money for his tussle with Rosenbloom. I understand there is one of those trick contracts which keeps Knight from making a fortune unless he gets 50 per cent of the gate has passed the $15,000 mark.

When the match was made, it was expected it would draw 250,000. The boys are now talking about a $25,000 take at the box office which is probably nearer what the contest will draw. Knight is still only a local attraction in the South, and will not attract the fans from distant points as did Stribling when he helped draw $410,000 when pitted against Jack Sharkey in February, 1930

Rosenbloom will enter the ring a favorite, Maxie gets serious in title bouts, and always enters the ring in good condition when his championship is at stake. Rosenbloom trains in night clubs for over weight tussles, but gets down to real business when a rugged opponent tries to tip him from his throne.

Florida Mecca of Boxers

Florida is the mecca for most of our leading boxers. It only remained for Max Baer to step into the party to make the picture complete. Primo Carnera and Tommy Loughran have already started light training for their 15-round world's heavyweight championship bout which will be staged at Miami on Feb. 22.

Loughran and Carnera have been busy helping along the dear old ballyhoo by sipping tea with society folks and splashing in the various pools. It is no longer fashionable for boxers to train in stuffy gyms. The powers that control the ring game prefer their fighters in white flannels, sports shoes, silk shirts and other such rags and nothing else.

Perhaps this is one of the troubles with the boxing game Too much nonsense and not enough fighting Imagine what the immortal John L. Sullivan would have said of a fighter he found sipping tea at a society function.

At the peak of his career Sullivan spent his odd moments visiting bar rooms, He was always followed by crowds. He would step into one of the many bar rooms then on Washington st., toss $100 on the bar and invite everybody in the house to have a drink on John L.

I believe the public likes its fighters rough. Give us another of the Sullivan type, bar room setting and all, and the boxing arenas of the country will not be large enough to care for the huge crowds who will turn out to see him release his fistic thunder.

Think of what will happen if Sonny is able to hit the "Bull" in the stomach . . . Jackie Davis, former Cleveland featherweight, will receive a severe ring test when he tangles up with Pancho Villa of New Bedford in a ten-round bout at Quincy on next Monday night. . . . The best game of the night appears to be between the Hagen Club of Somerville and the Irish Americans of South Boston. It will be played at the K. of C. Hall, Highland ave. These teams have met before with the Americans winning the first game. Tonight the Hagens expect to turn the tables but will meet stiff opposition as the Irishers are one of the best in these parts.

Another game that is exciting notice is that between Ben Hurwitz's Shawmut Club and the North End Union. These teams are leaders in the Greater Boston League. North End has been going on high up to date but will have to show everything they have tonight.

The Boston Whirlwinds play a double-header this Sunday at Nashua and Milford, N. H. They will have their regular lineup of Paul Lynch, Frannie Neal, Bill Barrett, "Lou" Thompson and "Fiddle" Morley . . . Pete Chesnulivich, former star at B. C., will be in the Nashua lineup . . . At Milford the star will be Jim Cassidy . . . He is not only a great player but also manages the team . . . Johnny Fox, coach of Y. M. H. A., is having hard luck . . . first he lost Winnespaha, Next Cubell broke his finger . . . then Fineberg broke his toe . . . But Johny has hopes of having them all back before the West End series . . . The Philly Giants show at Sterling, Mass. tonight . . . Pavlonis who starring in the retail stores league, will make his debut. Wilson of the M. C. A. next Monday night . . . Paul Lynch has everything to become the best pivot man in the division . . . "Fiddle" Morley, who teamed up with Leo Martin for years, has been tutoring Lynch and if "Fiddle" can show him some of the tricks that Martin had then he can't miss . . . Another player that Morley has been working with is Frannie Neal . . . His improvement has been very noticeable since the season started . . . One thing about "Fiddle," he knows the game and if these young fellows can absorb what he imparts them they are sure to start on the right path . . . Talking about improved players, last week there was one that was overlooked . . . "Buddy" Greenberg of the West End House has probably shown the most progress of them all . . . Not a star yet but well on the way.

GRABER, BROWN HURLEY HERE

Yale's great corps of pole vaulters, Keith Brown, Wirt Thompson and F. E. Pierce, all of whom can consistently flirt with the 14 foot mark, have been entered to compete in the B. A. A. games on the night of Feb. 10 at Boston Garden.

Last year, Brown won the Unicorn pole vault at 13 feet, 5 inches, later in the season tieing for the National A. A. U. title at 14 feet.

This year's event will be even more attractive with the announcement that Bill Graber, Southern California, will be in the field

NEW BILL HELP TO SCHOOLBOYS

A better deal for the schoolboy athletes of the state is sought in the form of a bill, which may go before the Legislature, which would authorize the school committees of the state to appropriate money to buy equipment and clothing for school sports.

Senator Frank Hurley of Holyoke is the petitioner for the legislation. In a hearing before the joint legislative committee on municipal finance, Senator Hurley told the board that cities and towns of the state, excluding Boston and Cambridge, are allowed to buy footballs, baseballs and such gear, but are not allowed to buy protective equipment.

Patrick T. Campbell, superintendent of schools in Boston, told the committee that the bills should be acted upon favorably. He said that the sports equipment should be loaned boys on the same basis as are text books.

RETURNS HERE LATER TO PLAY AT LONGWOOD

By WALTER KILEY

Miss Helen Jacobs, national women's champion, Frank Shields, No. 1 seeded U. S. player and national men's champion and George Lott are listed on a team of six men and women players whose tentatives plans to engage in the Jamaica, West Indies, tennis championships during the middle of February, are expected to receive official sanction of the U. S. L. T. A. when it convenes in New York tonight.

While the entire personnel of the team will not be released until after tonight's ratification, it is most likely that Miss Sarah Palfry of Brookline will be another of the party.

The United States group will face stern opposition at Jamaica in view of the fact that the 1933 British Wightman Cup team that lost to United States 4-3 at Forest Hills last August, has already accepted invitations and will sail from England shortly.

The American players will sail from New York on Feb. 10 and will have only a couple of days in which to become acclimated to the sun of tropical Jamaica.

The British team which will most likely consist of Dorothy Round, Peggy Scriven, Mary Heeley, Betty Nuthall and Freda James, will continue on to Bermuda for the annual championships there on Feb. 26, a title won last year by Miss Virginia Rice of Boston. Miss Rice of Boston, Miss Rice will defend her championship this year.

The only drawback to permission to allow leading women players to make the Jamaica trip is that the national indoor championships are being held at the Seventh Regiment Armory, New York, on Feb. 17th, conflicting dates.

The national title event has been held at Longwood's indoor courts since 1920 and is moved back to New York for the first time since 1918.

Inasmuch as Miss Jacobs did not intend participating in the indoor championships, there is only small doubt of the U. S. L. T. A. giving her official permission to play at Jamaica.

Up to recently she had made no plans to compete in tourney play previous to the French championships at Paris in May. The outdoor practice in the West Indies will doubtless tune her up for the heavy sessions of title tilts in the near future.

Miss Jacobs will not continue on to Bermuda, but will return to Boston and Manhasset as soon as possible in order to play in the New England indoor championships at Longwood, which start on March 19.

The Jacobs-Palfry combination hope through the medium of practicing together to get into prime condition for the Wightman Cup matches at Wimbledon this summer.

This pair teamed two years ago and were undefeated in five major tournaments. Last year they were instrumental in returning victory to United States in the Wightman Cup matches, turning in a decisive win in doubles as well as in singles matches.

Miss Palfry has been inactive as far as tourney play is concerned this winter, following a tonsil operation, but will start intensive training immediately.

Holder of Mile Record Plans to Race Here This Summer

New York, Feb. 1—Jack Lovelock, of Oxford University, the New Zealander who ran the world record of 4:07.6 in mile at Princeton last year, plans to race in America this summer and probably compete in the national championships.

Lovelock has completely recovered from a knee injury, it was reported by Eddie Mayo, former American runner, who returned today. The Oxford senior is serious, considering coming to the United States, reminds Mayo who recently returned from London.

"Jack will be as good as ever," said Mayo, or as the doctors say, "In fact, I told him that over in America some people thought that Glenn Cunningham or somebody would do a 4-minute mile, maybe 3.58. Lovelock smiled and remarked, 'If Cunningham or anybody does a 3.58 mile I think I can.'"

Name Dogs After Baer, Dempsey

The feature attraction at Mechanics Building, Feb. 21 and 22 will be the personal appearance of Max Baer and Jack Dempsey at the Eastern Dog Club show. Dempsey is a bulldog, who registered as a champion by the American Kennel Club, while Baer is a German "Boxer." The latter is a rare breed.

TILDEN BEATS VINES EASILY

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 1 (AP)—Big Bill Tilden romped through Mike-and-Ike Vines in easy fashion last night in a professional tennis match, winning 10 straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

Tilden's victory was his fifth in the best-of-seven cross-country tour as compared with eight for Vines.

AFFINITO FLIES TO GARDEN GO

"Red" Affinito, New York University boxer, will take a page out of the book of Gene Tunney and fly to the scene of battle when he meets Al McCoy of Dorchester as a ten-round bout at the Boston Garden tomorrow night.

Affinito is obliged to take to the air as he has an examination he must undergo at New York University at 9 a. m. tomorrow morning. Following the examination, he will motor to the aviation field at Newark, and take a noon plane for Boston. He will arrive at the Mt. Boston airport shortly after 2 o'clock, and taxi to the State House for the weighing in ceremonies at 3 o'clock.

Affinito has won his three Boston starts, and is of the opinion he will punch out a victory over McCoy.

With a prize of $100 going to the boxers in the best bout has also the preliminary boys steamed up.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

George Owen, who was a nine-letter man at Harvard and former Bruin star, has been appointed hockey coach at M. I. T. for the remainder of the season. Under Coach Owen the Engineers should go places, for their new mentor knows his hockey, along with being an inspiration to his charges.

Following the wretched exhibition of refereeing he exhibited during the Maroon-American game, "Dinny" Dinsmore was suspended by Frank Patrick, managing director of the N. H. L. According to reports, Dinsmore would have been of less value to the Maroons had he been wearing his old Montreal sweater.

With a goodly sprinkling of Cubs, the Bruins will tackle the Red Wings tonight in Detroit. Babe Siebert was left at home, due to an injury received in the Ranger game, and Perk Galbraith postponed his scouting trip to fill in the vacancy.

In their first start under the management of Lionel Hitchman the Cubs tied the Arrows last night in Philadelphia and again slipped out in front in the race for Canadian American League honors. Lloyd Gross and Bert McInenly did the scoring for the Cubs and Hitch made his debut as a minor leaguer.

If the Rangers, Chicago and Detroit slump into a four points out of ten for the rest of the season, the Bruins must hit at a seven out of ten clip to catch the Red Wings. The Toronto Maple Leafs is the only club that has been able to click at a .700 pace this season, so the chances of the Bruins reaching the play offs are slim.

Evidently the Bruin spokesman started to pop off in New York last Sunday after his drinking contest with a couple of Boston newspapermen on the trip to Gotham, for the exclusive story that Patterson and Gross had been sold down the river appeared in a New York paper 24 hours before it was released here.

Art Chapman and Bob Gracie will be laughing until mid summer over the trade that sent them to the Americans for George Patterson and Lloyd Gross who are now with the Cubs.

4 HEAVIES ON AMERK CARD

Paul Chute, Boston; Charlie Belforti, Wellesley; Edward Smith, Watertown, and William Demarcio, Norwood, are heavyweights who will don gloves in Tom Sheehan's weekly amateur boxing tourney at the Irish-American A. C. clubhouse in South Boston this evening.

Other well known "pures" to compete are James Garrett, South End; Ed Carroll, Lowell; Frances Sestito, Worcester, and Sammy Fallano, South End, in the 147-pound class; Tony Bent, Cambridge, and Edward Sweeney, Norwood, in the 135-pound class; Abe Denner, West End; Irish Johnny Smith, Quincy, and John Whalen, South Boston, and Eddie Rossi, Everett, in the 160-pound class.

Penn State Star To Meet Mephisto

TUNIS ADVISES TO SPECIALIZE

By JOHN R. TUNIS

(Noted Tennis Writer Now Writing Exclusively for Universal and Boston Evening American

Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Feb. 1—"My idea of practice is to pick out one stroke and hammer away at it until it is coompletely mastered." These are the words of a man who has the mastery of every shot in tennis. His name is W. T. Tilden.

The average player wants to make every shot in the game before he has learned one thoroughly. The man with a sound and reliable forehand over which he has some degree of control is 50 times as good as the slashing chap who tries to make an ace every time he serves; who charges into the net to smash and volley without the slightest idea where the ball will go.

How many there are of the latter, and how painfully few of the former. Yes, even in topclass tennis I've seen men who are not sure of their strokes, who slash away at the ball in a critical moment without any certainty that it will fall in court. In fact, I've known many tournament players with a single good shot beat men classed above them because they had a sound, dependable weapon.

Learn one shot well. This isn't to be taken as meaning that a player with one shot has a desirable game, or that a well-rounded game isn't necessary. But many players take tennis too quickly. They don't stop long enough to master even a single shot.

Learn to make a drive, forehand and backhand. Learn it thoroughly before you try to volley or smash. Practice your ground strokes. Keep on practicing. Stand well away from the ball. Watch it right on to your racquet. Then when your ground strokes begin to stand up, and then only, come into forecourt and develop an attack. One thing at a time.

FORBES WARNS LEADERS TO KEEP BUSY

Biggest Problem Seen as Absorption of Unemployed

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Feb. 1—Things are moving encouragingly, but I would like to make a profound-ly earnest plea to employers, to executives, to all financial and business men exercising authority not to conclude that everything will work out entirely satisfactorily without exertion on their part.

Responsible men of affairs must not be lulled into a sense of ease by current developments.

The need still exists, as I see it, for corporations, for employers, for executives, for everybody to do everything possible to insure that there will be no fatal let-down in activity and employment when the government's colossal expenditures diminish.

B. C. Forbes

Instead of a "let's-wait-and-see" policy, every business concern possessing the necessary capital or credit, should not act on the easy-going assumption that the depression is definitely over and that there is no need for them to adopt and energetically execute constructive policies and programs.

It is perfectly proper to reason that the depression can be licked.

It would be dangerous, it would be fraught with very unpleasant possibilities, if most men of affairs were to conclude cocksurely that everything will turn out all right no matter how they may act, no matter how gingerly they may proceed, no matter how closely they hug the shore.

The biggest problem of all has not yet been solved, namely, the absorption of the great bulk of unemployed workers by private enterprises.

Number of Traders Have Been Caught Waiting Reactions

By WALL ST. SPECTATOR

The long awaited devaluation of the dollar announced late yesterday should prove the stimulus for a further mark up in stock prices today. Yesterday's attack of indigestion which the market suffered was to be expected in view of the extent of the rise so far. The President's move, while generally expected, will show quite a number of traders to have been caught without stock and just waiting for further reactions before getting in, which was in itself a highly bullish feature. The devaluation proclamation probably will delay any further irregularity for the time being.

TURNOVER IN LEADERS SMALL

Leadership of the list the past two days has been uninspiring.

This is illustrated by the fact that the turnover in yesterday's market leaders was approximately 410,000 shares against 390,000 in the 30 industrial stocks in the Dow Jones average.

Dealings in National Distillers and Sperry Corp. alone accounted for more than 200,000 shares, not counting the 85,000-share turnover in Douglas.

A performance of this sort usually presages a distribution phase, but smart traders do not believe the list has yet reached that point.

The wheat market is being groomed for an advance, according to usually smart traders.

They point out that despite the unusual activity in stocks which are not at the best levels since last summer wheat has done very little toward duplicating its July, 1933 high of $1.25 a bushel.

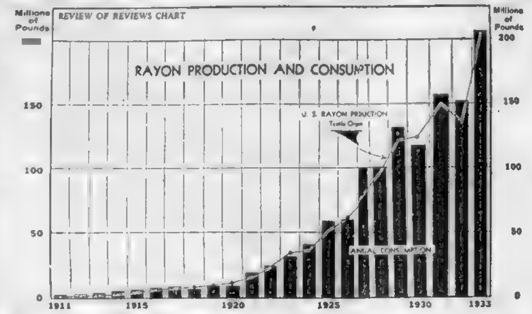
Rayon Production Below Demand



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE, Review of Reviews

This chart shows an infant industry whose youthful vitality has been so overwhelmed that it has been able to ignore the presence of the depression. Where other textiles, particularly silk, cotton and wool, have clearly registered the ill effects of four long years of declining business, the rayon industry has reached upward with all the exuberance of youth to touch levels never before occupied by it.

Furthermore, the industry is in the very happy position where it does not seem able to keep up with the growing demand for its products. With the exception of 1930, when an overproduction for the industry as a whole occurred the other years show in each case production somewhat less than consumption.

This in general is characteristic of a product that meets a wide-felt public need and is priced at a level where a growing potential demand can be gratified at existing levels of income. Rayon has proved itself to be a versatile, adaptable, attractive and durable textile fibre which for many uses has given silk a close race.

From the point of view of the new economic nationalism which pervades the governmental philosophy of today, rayon has the supreme virtue of being a product manufactured entirely by domestic labor and capital. Imports are still a factor, but this is due chiefly to the inability of the domestic industry to keep up with demand.

BOSTON STOCKS AGAIN RISE

Leading shares again pushed forward in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today after encountering profit-taking around mid-day. Gains ranged from fractions to 5 points. New River preferred soared 5 points to reach a new top.

Pacific Mills reached a new high on a rise of a point. American Woolen common and preferred and Amoskeag were fractionally improved. Rail shares strengthened with Atchison and Pennsylvania showing gains of a point or better.

Live News of Active Leaders in Wall St.

BROKERS say their clients are more bullish on the steel and rails than any other group at the moment and that the odd-lot buying in these departments is increasing right along.

Steel to Offer Stock to Employes

Some quarters anticipated the U. S. Steel Corp. will announce its annual offering of common stock to employes within two weeks and figure the price above $50 a share.

C. & O. as Rail Holding Company

Chesapeake & Ohio's $92,000,000 stake in railroad stocks, which looked like a high-priced lemon in the middle of 1932, is beginning to take on an entirely different aspect. The heavy holdings of the company and its two wholly-owned company and its two wholly-owned tion and West Pocahontas Corp in the Erie, Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate, have advanced in value as prices of rail stocks have risen. C. & O. is far from having its holdings back to the prices at which they cost it, but instead of being worth only around $7,500,000, as they were in late April, 1932, their value now is up to around $30,000,000.

MARKET HEADED STILL HIGHER, SAYS HANEY

Tendency to Bull All Sorts of Issues Is Disliked

By LEWIS HANEY, Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Feb. 1—On Monday I said that if the rise in stocks was not resumed immediately a technical reaction would be likely. I also suggested that if the volume of trading held up and scattered bullish "operations" continued another attempt at the Wednesday high might be made.

Well, Monday brought a rise, and Tuesday saw bullish operations on large volume which poked the averages through last Wednesday's high. So the logic of the situation indicates that the market is headed for still higher levels.

Of course, we must always remember that some unforeseeable change at Washington might occur. The usual "technical" dips in the market are also to be allowed for, and something of this sort is likely to follow such a spurt as Tuesday's. But allowing for such considerations, the action of the market indicates a willingness and an ability of the market to move still higher eventually.

Even the bulls should desire some reaction. Technical reactions tend to keep the supply of stocks adjusted to the demand, and to prevent weak "pyramiding." They allow cautious buyers to come in at better prices. Such a reaction has been expected. I doubt that it will be very severe, and am inclined to think that there are enough people considering purchases of stocks to insure good buying.

Two things which any friend of the market does not like are:

(2)—The widespread notion among the less thoughtful people that the passage of the "money bill" is the signal for an immediate inflation or depreciation of the dollar.

State St. Joyous as Dollar Value in Gold Is Set

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State st. received the news of a fixed dollar gold value joyously. Keen observers see most of the uncertainty regarding monetary matters as cleared up. They expect that the road leading to large scale private financing has been cleared sufficiently to open the capital markets once again to corporations desirous of funds for either expansion or refunding operations. This, we believe, is of the greatest significance.

As for the markets, one may rightfully expect a period of celebration marked by higher equity and commodity prices. As far as our personal policy is concerned, there is no need to do anything. We hold in our hypothetical position a broad list of stocks that should have a full part in the festivities. To our mind there is no need to expand it at this time. Rather will we be on the alert for profit taking opportunities.

MARKET POLICY GIVEN STUDY

Outside of possible acceptance of a few broad profits, in the event prices bulge in a decided manner, it is not the intention of this column to get out of the market on the long side in the near future. For the benefit of those who neglected to buy shares we are inclined to advise caution.

Some measure of reaction should follow and then the initiation of a bull stand will be possible.

Notes: Sharp strength on the latest gold step is likely to carry prices into the 110-112 area on the industrial average . . . The rails ought to make a spot between 52-54 . . . There the resistance is expected to be stubborn enough to to force a correction . . . So we would wait on all issues recently noted here if they were not bought before today.

There is one stock we noted before that we wish to call attention to again. It is Archer Daniels Midland. We look on this one in just the same way we gazed on Douglas many months ago. Earnings estimates heard recently indicate around $4 per share for 1934. Good people tell us to put it away on any dip for future reference.

Sidelights: The gold shares reported here as well bought last week are still allright . . . Some people knew what they were doing . . . As we said last summer this group of stocks is to be looked on as semi-permanent holdings . . . We would not advise the average market follower to try and trade with them . . . Their '34 outlook is rosy.

OFFICIAL DATA GIVEN ABOUT INCOME TAXES

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor, Boston American

Timely data about income tax problems, prepared exclusively for this column comes to us endorsed as to accuracy by J. P. Carney, collector of Internal Revenue for Massachusetts.

Who must file an income tax return?

Single persons who had net income of $1,000 or more or gross income of $5000 or more, and married couples who had net income of $2500 or more or gross income of $5000 or more in 1933 must file returns.

Collector Carney

When?

Where?

Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which the person lives or has his principal place of business.

How?

Provide yourself with forms 1040A and 1040, obtainable from the collector of internal revenue, and see instructions on the forms.

What are the income tax rates?

Four per cent normal tax on the first $4000 in excess of personal exemption and credits. Eight per cent normal tax on the balance of net income. Surtax on net income in excess of $6000.

* * *

Income Tax Don'ts:

How may common errors be avoided?

The period for filing of income tax returns covering the calendar year 1933 begins January 1 and ends at midnight of March 15. Within this period are filed annually millions of individual income-tax returns, a large proportion of which report income subject to the tax. The latter contains a considerable percentage of errors, which if uncorrected by the audit would result to the disadvantage of the taxpayer.

Many are errors of computation easily discovered on the face of the return, which usually is accompanied by a payment of more than the amount of tax due.

In other returns it is readily discernible that the taxpayer has failed to take advantage of the personal exemption, credit allowed for dependents, or deductions from gross income to which he is entitled.

To avoid these and other errors, the Bureau of Internal Revenue urges careful reading of the instructions on the forms of filing the returns. Additional information, if needed, may be obtained at the office of a collector of internal revenue, deputy collector, or an internal revenue agent in charge.

Also, as a further aid in the preparation of a correct income tax return for the year 1933, the bureau has prepared a series of short newspaper articles, of which this is the first, advising the salaried man, wage earner, professional and business man—in fact, every class of individual taxpayer—of his requirements and privileges as interpreted under the latest regulations, ruling, and decisions relating to the income tax law.

Wheat Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, Feb. 1—Higher prices for wheat and active trading today accompanied advances in gold and sterling and buoyancy shown by the stock market. Besides, there was no moisture relief in drought districts of domestic winter wheat territory southwest.

Opening at ⅜-1⅛ cent up, wheat afterward reacted somewhat. Corn started ⅛-⅜ higher and subsequently lost some of the gains.

Cotton Is at New Tops in New York

New York, Feb. 1—President Roosevelt's dollar devaluation announcement brought a rush of buying into the cotton ring today, with futures climbing almost $1 a bale to new tops for the season before being checked by heavy profit-taking.

The run of contracts showed gains of 12 to 13 points, with March up 13 at 11.50; May up 12 at 11.65; July up 13 at 11.82, and October up 13 at 11.90.

BUYING RUSHES BOOM STOCK LEADERS

New York, Feb. 1—Stocks greeted the new American dollar with a jubilant cheer today, and intermittent buying rushes sent prices of many issues hurtling upward to the best levels of the past year or more.

All groups drew some of their best followings since the 1933 spring-summer boom and gains of 1 to 4 or more points were scattered over a broad front. The ticker tape lagged frequently. Profit-taking flurries occasionally halted the pace, but realizing was quickly absorbed and the climb breasted.

Cotton and some other commodities improved. The cereals rallied, wheat getting up more than 1 cent a bushel. Secondary bonds were bid up vigorously, although other groups were mixed.

Merchandising shares, including Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward were in demand in the final hour, with thousands of shares of the latter changing hands about 2 points above yesterday's closing prices. R. H. Macy was another feature gaining more than a point on a comparatively small turnover.

Stocks were whirled forward feverishly in the first hour with blocks of 1000 to 10,000 shares changing hands. Homestake Mining was a feature of the period speeding ahead 12 points, but losing about ¼ of the rise before the period closed. U. S. Smelting halved an earlier gain of better than 3 points. Seaboard Oil was over 3 points higher.

Issues up 2 or more points included Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, du Pont, Motor Products and Sears Roebuck. A 10,000-share block of National Distillers was more than 2 points above its last closing price.

U. S. Steel showed a gain of a point. Consolidated Gas, selling ex-dividend, was better than a point higher.

Shares encountered profit-taking in the second hour and best prices were shaded moderately. Advances of a point or better appeared for American Can, American Telephone, Atchison, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Bethlehem Steel, Baltimore & Ohio, Bohn Aluminum, Chesapeake Corp. Corn Products and Dome Mines.

General Electric, Case, Goodyear and others too numerous to mention rcorded advances of a point or more.

Rails and utilities were again started forward near the end of the second period and gains in these groups were extended moderately.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 1,210,000 shares.

Department store shares and rails were leaders in the third hour. Spiegel, May, Stern featured with a runup of over 4 points. Macy showed a gain of almost 3 points. Safeway Stores showed a gain of 3 points. Baltimore & Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line, Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio and Lackawanna were 1 to 2 or more points higher. Deleware & Hudson went 4 points higher.

Eastman Kodak, Mack Truck, General Electric, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward and Westinghouse were 1 to 2 or more points improved. Allied Chemical was 3 points higher.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 2,920,000 shares.

Fourth hour prices were around the highs for the session and gains of 1 to 4 or more points ruled. Devoe & Reynolds was better than 4 points higher. Issues up 3 or more included Case Threshing, Spiegel, May Stern, Allied Chemical.

People's Gas advanced more than 2 points. New York Central, Montgomery Ward, General Electric, Chrysler and du Pont were 2 or more points improved.

Sales to 2 p. m. approximated 3,790,000 shares.

Boston Wool Mart Prices Are Steady

"Trading is rather slow in most lines of greasy combing domestic wool. Occasional lots of 64s and finer territory wools continue to move at steady prices. Inquiries are being received on medium qualities and a few small sales are being closed. Prices are firm on territory lines at 80-83c, scoured basis, for strictly combing 56s, ⅜ blood, and at 72-74c for strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼ blood," says the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Record High Set for World Gold

London, Feb. 1 (INS)—A record high for the price of world gold as set daily in London was established today when the bullion was quoted at 135 shillings, six-pence per ounce, with a premium of one shilling, 8½ pence over the French rate. Today's price was equal to about $34.08 in American currency at the opening exchange rate of $5.03½.

Canadian Gold Buying Feverish

Toronto, Feb. 1 (AP)—The Standard Mining Exchange, stimulated by President Roosevelt's monetary announcement of yesterday, operated at fever heat today. Gold shares had the lead and gains up to $2 were registered.

Prize Martha Lee Recipes

No. 287---First Prize Tested Recipes

Five Dollar Prize Winner for Thursday

K. A. McGOVERN
51 Hamilton ave., Haverhill, Mass.

SURPRISE EGGS

Hard cook 6 eggs and when cold remove the shells. Coat the entire surface of the eggs with seasoned flour and then wrap each egg in uncooked sausage meat (one pound should be sufficient) making sure each egg is thoroughly covered. Add salt and pepper if necessary. Again roll the sausage eggs in seasoned flour. Cut out 12 rounds of bread about ¼-inch thick and saute them until a golden brown on both sides; keep hot. Meanwhile fry sausage eggs in deep fat for three minutes or until meat is thoroughly cooked. Drain and cut eggs in halves. Stand each half on round of sauteed bread and serve garnished with parsley.

BOSTON TESTED AMERICAN

FIVE PRIZES OF ONE DOLLAR EACH

MRS. DANIEL L. BREI
759 E. Broadway, So. Boston, Mass.

DATE BARS

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
40 dates (10 oz.)
1 cup chopped walnuts
1 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
⅛ tsp. salt
3 tabps. water
¼ cup powdered sugar

Cream the granulated sugar well with the beaten eggs and the water. Mix the chopped dates and nuts with the flour, salt and baking powder sifted together. Combine with the sugar and egg mixture. Spread in layer 4 inches wide and ½ inch thick on a slightly greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven 15 to 20 minutes, or until firm to touch. Remove the side crusts. Cut in bars 1 inch wide and 4 inches long. Roll in powdered sugar. Makes about 36 bars.

TROPICAL GINGERBREAD

½ cup butter
2 eggs
1 tsp. soda
½ cup molasses
1 tsp. ginger
1 tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. salt
1½ cups flour
½ cup acid water
1 cup fresh grated or moist-packed cocoanut

Cream well the butter and sugar, add eggs, beat all together. Dissolve soda in molasses and add all to first mixture. Mix and sift remaining dry ingredients and add to first mixture, alternately with cold water. Stir in cocoanut. Pour into well greased pan and bake in moderate oven 35 minutes. Ice with Cocoanut Frosting:

Boil 1 cup sugar and ¼ cup water without stirring, until syrup forms a long thread when dropped from tip of spoon. Beat 2 egg whites stiff, then slowly pour syrup over egg whites, stirring constantly. Add ⅛ tsp. lemon extract. Beat until right consistency to spread. Sprinkle thickly with cocoanut.

SCALLOPED BEETS WITH BACON

Place two cups of small sliced beets in a baking dish
1 tbsp. butter
2 tbsps. flour
¼ cup vinegar
Juice of one lemon
3 tsps. sugar

Melt butter and add flour. Put lemon juice and vinegar in a cup and add water enough to fill, add to butter and flour, add sugar and cook. When thickened, pour over beets, mixing well. Lay strips of bacon over top. Cover the dish and bake in a hot oven until bacon is brown.

SPICED PORK ROAST WITH FRUIT NUT DRESSING

Have a butcher remove bones and prepare to roll a 5 pound loin of pork. Make a dressing as follows:
2 cups cooked dried apricots
1 orange, grated rind and juice
1 lemon, grated rind and juice
1-2 cup melted butter
4 cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup walnuts, coarsely broken
½ tsp. allspice
½ tsp. cloves
½ tsp. cinnamon
1½ tsp. salt
1-3 tsp. pepper

Drain and dice apricots and combine with fruit rinds and juices. Pour melted butter over crumbs, add nuts and seasonings and combine the two mixtures, adding if necessary additional fruit juices. Spread dressing on pork and roll, fastening securely with skewers. Put into hot oven (450 deg. F.). Brown all sides, lower temperature to 325 deg. F. and cook, allowing 25 minutes for each pound.

side of his coat. The driver's hand was thrust within his coat lapel. Before he could withdraw it, Frank swung his pistol forward.

The heavy barrel met the forehead of the other. The driver lurched backward against the fender. Grahame swung and dropped to his knees. Again the gun from within the car roared.

HE KISSES HER

Frank threw up the muzzle of his weapon and fired at the flash. A man cried out; there was the clang of metal. A door struck tinnily against the side of the car.

Springing to his feet, Frank tore at the rear door of the car. He jerked it open, twisted sideways and thrust his gun within. Instantly he saw that the two opposite doors were open. Through the other open rear door he saw two men clawing up the short embankment. He peered into the tonneau.

Janice Kent was there. Her face was vague, her eyes round and staring. He saw that she was gagged. Fumblingly he worked at the knot at the back of her neck.

"Janice!" he muttered a little hoarsely. ". . . you all right?"

Her cheek seemed to press his lapel. She murmured, "I don't know. I think so."

Frank glanced about him. The driver—the man he had struck with his gun—was gone. The other two men were not in view. The nondescript car looked oddly desolate with its gaping doors.

"I'll roll the stones back off the road," he said. "Spin, you climb in the back with Janice."

Frank and Janice walked from the hotel room where lay Spin, to the detached cottage that was to be the girl's for the night.

At the doorway she turned her face, a bit white in the moonlight, to Frank. Her voice held the huskiness of fatigue when she said:

"Good night, Frank. You've been such a dear—Oh, I don't mean that. How absurdly trivial words are! I mean—"

Frank kissed her. Her lips against his were cool and detached—a curious aloofness that caused Frank, in a brief flash, to think of the figurines of the Virgin he'd seen in remote niches of lost churches found in forgotten jungles.

"I love you, Janice," said Frank. The words were husky in his throat.

YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Round Up Gangsters or Shelve Police

When Brigadier-General Daniel Needham declares that the people of Boston and Massachusetts have a desperate fight on their hands to conquer the criminal gangs which beset them, he is stating a grave condition which must be obvious to every citizen.

Crime has broken out with a new and unrestrained violence in this territory.

They have held up banks in broad daylight in a dozen Massachusetts communities.

They have shot down the proprietors of business establishments.

They have robbed the mails in the custody of the United States government itself.

They have murdered important witnesses who were supposed to derive the protection of the courts and police.

They have kidnaped the police in their own high-powered cars; they have beaten the policemen and defied police authority as if it were utterly impotent.

They have abused the courts, manipulated pardons and paroles and put themselves on the street as free men again, with guns in their hands.

They have held up the State Police exhibit in Mechanics Building during the Boston Automobile Show and brazenly stolen the police revolvers, machine-guns and other weapons which were supposed to represent the authority of the police and their defense of public safety.

The fact is that these desperate criminals have outraged public decency, held the government in cheap contempt and violated all the rights of free citizens to the possession of life and property.

Behind the gangs are the overlords of crime.

"They live in respectable communities. They give to charity. They move in social circles. The public would be astonished if it knew their identities."

Well, the public has been astonished in so many ways, it will be able to survive the astonishment of knowing the identity of these overlords of depravity and crime.

Put these master criminals on the spot.

They don't hesitate to put innocent men and women on the spot through the vicious criminal outrages of their underworld gangsters and subordinates.

If the police leadership were efficient for one week and if the policemen determined to be efficient for one week, they could rout these gangsters out of their dens and show to them as little mercy as they have shown for the defenseless men and women they have mowed down in the streets.

Try it, police leaders and policemen.

Public sentiment demands it. Public sentiment will tolerate any drastic action that may be taken against the merciless sway of gangdom.

Unless the police destroy this rule by gangsters, we will be compelled to call for the reign of martial law in this country. The military will be called, with guns in their hands that they know how to use, and the police departments will be put away in camphor, as a relic of incompetency.

Major General Hersey

Major-General Mark L. Hersey went to his reward with scarcely the public notice his excellent record should have commanded.

He was born in Stetson, Me., and from that town he went to West Point and to forty years of continuous service in the United States Army. He taught military science and tactics both at the University of Maine and at Harvard. He took part in the Santiago campaign, the Philippine insurrection, the China relief expedition and the punitive expedition into Mexico. He commanded an infantry brigade in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. He commanded Fort Devens here. He was purchasing agent for the city of Boston.

In peace time he trained and in war time he led the sons of New England. We should enthrone him in our memories with the same gratitude we have expressed for the other beloved New England figures.

Women as Debt Payers

It's great to be an American woman, said Antonia Vallentin.

She may vote, hold office or conduct her own business under the same privileges and the same restrictions that apply to men. The labor laws that affect her particularly are intended to help her.

The Frenchwoman, for example, possesses only the faintest trace of political freedom. She may have a bank account only under certain conditions. Nor may she manage her own property unless this right is specified in her marriage contract.

Now we may understand why France has run out on her debt to Uncle Sam. The men hold the purse strings. And men are rarely so meticulous in paying their bills so fully and promptly as women.

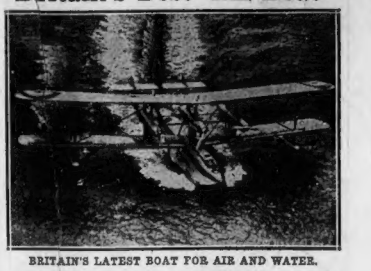
Honoring Our Parents

The students of Simmons College took a poll in which they were asked to rank the Ten Commandments according to their own ideas of relative importance. The Commandment which instructs us to "Honor thy father and thy mother" led all the others in the estimation of these girls. A similar poll was taken seven years ago among the girls who were students then. The result was identical.

This is a gratifying picture, in sharp contrast to the tales of juvenile crime that are frequent and conspicuous. Young people "honor" their parents by leading decent, worthwhile lives.

Clear Sailing— Why Not Change Boats? -:- By T. E. Powers

Britain's Best 'Air-Boat'



BRITAIN'S LATEST BOAT FOR AIR AND WATER.

This picture of the latest and biggest British heavier-than-air flying boat is printed to remind you that foreign countries are busy doing the things that the United States ought to be doing.

This ship, built to fly through the air and land and travel on the water, as you see here, is the biggest in the world next to the German "DO-X."

But the German boat has not the seaworthy capacities of the British boat nor its carrying capacity.

This "short flying-boat," one unit in the British Royal Air Force, carries collapsible lifeboats that will take care of her entire crew in case of forced landing on the water.

It has a crew of ten men, has comfortable sleeping quarters, a kitchen.

The ship with her three engines, loaded with high explosives and deadly gases, would not make us feel comfortable if it appeared suddenly over an America city.

Our good British friends would not dream of attacking us, but somebody else might do it, or our British friends might even change their minds and decide that we needed a little attacking.

Russia alone has six times the airplane manufacturing capacity of the United States.

The United States Government is the only government of any consequence that is not constantly experimenting with new, better, more deadly aircraft.

We may regret that some day, and you might write to your Congressmen and your Senators, if you know their names, to tell them so.

Human Side of the News; Monks in New Work

By Edwin C. Hill

From Lhasa, sacred city in the Himalaya Mountains of unknown Tibet, comes the knews that monks of the famous St. Bernard in the Alps have established on the southern boundary of Tibet, in the Si-La Pass, 14,760 feet above sea level and in the region of eternal ice and snow, another great life-saving service such as they have conducted with their heroic dogs for a thousand years in the great St. Bernard Hospice on the Swiss-Italian frontier in Europe.

Almost no single institution has given greater service to humanity than the order which was founded in 962 by St. Bernard. In their great monastery in the Alps Mountains, where the snow piles 30 feet deep in the passes, they have rescued thousands of travelers caught in storm and blizzard. Today their wonderful dogs go out, alone, to search the wind-swept, snow-heaped trails for travelers struck down by cold and exhaustion—dogs like the great Barry which saved 40 human lives and was killed at last by the 40th man he saved; killed in fright and panic, while on his errand of mercy.

But foot travelers are growing scarce in the Alps. The monks of St. Bernard found time heavy on their hands. So they sent a mission to the Dalai Lama at Lhasa, and from him obtained permission to locate and build another monastery in the high Himalayas, one that stands 6000 feet higher than their famous hospiece in the Alps.

Through the Si-La Pass, where they now work with their almost humanly intelligent dogs, thousands of pilgrims from India and the Far East make their way to the Buddhist shrines of Tibet, and thousands of traders, likewise, going from Central Asia to the plains of Hindustan, or the other way about. Hundreds perish every year, and now the monks of St. Bernard have gone to the rescue, to continue in Asia the service they have carried on for ten centuries in Europe.

"And now, over there on the roof of the world, the stricken traveler, sinking to exhaustion in the snow, will feel a grotesque form thrusting itself through the white shroud; will feel a huge bulk press against him; will feel something warm and wet touching his face. With his last senses he will clutch at a great, shaggy neck, and come to his feet as the wonderful dog noses him upright, and holds him, and supports him, and shows him, as if by so many words, the life-giving flask of brandy hanging at his collar, and down the long pass the two will go, the weary traveler staggering at the great dog's side, holding fast to his mane, until the lights of the monastery glow beyond the rise.

The new Japanese ambassador to the United States, Mr. Hiroshi Saito, will arrive in this country sometime in February, and will come bearing an olive branch. It is very obvious, from the expression of Japanese public men in the past few months, that Japan is eager and anxious to cultivate better relations with this country. She is especially anxious that Americans gain some clear understanding of what is actually going on in China and in the vast region north of China.

Without question, Mr. Saito will tell our President that the great battle which Japan is fighting in the Far East is not against China, or the broken remnants of China, but against the spread of Communism, the advance of Russia to overwhelm the Far Eastern world.

Japan is not 3000 miles removed from the menace of Communism as we are. Communism to Japan is a deadly peril, as it was to Italy, to Austria-Hungary, to Poland and to Germany. The Japanese know that if Soviet Russia succeeds in communizing China, it would mean the ruin and extinction of the Japanese people and the breakdown of civilization.

In the State of Manchukuo, Japan has raised a bulwark against the spread of Red anarchy, and she will fight to the last man and the last woman to block the Red advance. Today, in China itself, the Japanese are helping orderly Chinese governments against the Communist revolutionists that have seized whole provinces. They are doing their best to stamp out the bandit army that has wrecked old China.

And Japan is fighting a great fight against opium, the curse of the Far East. The Chinese generals, who lead robber armies and bleed the Chinese people white, force the people to grow opium in order that they can collect heavy taxes. Japan and Japan alone is doing the work of civilization in north Asia, and it is to be hoped that a clear understanding of what she is up against can prevail against the propaganda that has been spread against Japan and the Japanese in this country for the past twenty years.

Japan is the hope of Asia today. If we can make friends with her, and cease interfering in the work that she is driven to do, we need have no fear of any war with her. The Japanese will have no designs on Mexico or our Pacific Coast, if they can have their way in Asia.

There is probably nothing more important in the foreign relations of the United States of America, except the strengthening of friendship with the British Commonwealth of Nations, than to become good friends with Japan.

O. O. McIntyre

New York Day by Day

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—In the jostling tumult of Cherry st., is niched a picturesque slice of Spain. Every upstairs window seems to feature a squawking parrot and now and then a hard-bitten character with a peg leg, a ring in his ear and a vocabulary suggesting the Spanish main.

O. O. McIntyre

Restaurants are all the same kidney. Almost bare dining rooms with low ceilings and oil cloth covered tables. The kitchen is in full view with fat and perspiring cooks bending over the heat. And always the inevitable overfed cafe cat and a picture of Alfonso turned to the wall.

Each cafe has a fixed price, which includes hors d'oeuvres, bouillabaisse, shrimp bisque and little necks clams floating in a thick garlic sauce. Also those hitch-post lengths of crusty Spanish bread. Wine is extra and the patron may drink all he can hold without frowns by the management.

In the grand old days near-by are earthenware pots and jugs straight from Valencia. Wine rooms feature guitarists, castanet dancers and frequently a retired bull fighter sitting alone to muse over vanquished glory. Anchovies in the section may be purchased for a dime a can.

The re-opened bar at the Metropolitan opera is likely the most crowded drinking salon in the metropolis during intermission. Here one sees, too, the most magnificently dressed group of thirsty. Otto Kahn in the swirl of his Inverness cape. The diamond tiaraed Mrs. Frank Storrs. Society's best dressed man, William Goadby Loew. And so on. The most popular tipple is the champagne cocktail and a thimble of cognac.

Few newspapermen are steady opera goers, the most constant in New York is Karl K. Kitchen, with Lucius Beebe a runner-up. Kitchen also never misses a symphony. Among the novelists who love opera are Rupert Hughes, Julian Street, Joseph Hergesheimer and Kathleen Norris.

Incidentally, a recently bereaved novelist sent this reply to a message of condolence from a friend: "Your sympathy is tenderly expressed. But, after all, it would not matter much what you said. When one is wandering in the dark looking for a way back to the sunshine, he is not so much concerned in the words that hail him — it's the friendly voice he wants to hear."

The Rialto's dean of press agents is Claude P. Greneker, who has three-sheeted for the Shuberts nearly 30 years. A soft-spoken gentleman of sedate dress, he has none of the gaudy qualities of the average theatrical press agent. Away from his desk he is a devotee of the classics and a student of period furnishings. Although he has been the spokesman in several disbarments of critics, they all like him. He is one of the few press agents who, seated well down front, attends all his own first nights.

Thingumbobs: Carol McComas is appearing in an American stock company in Shanghai . . . Bert Lytell's father, grandfather and great-grandfather were actors . . . Marcel Proust's mother had to brew a pot tea for him every night or he could not sleep . . . Grantland Rice holds down five separate jobs successfully . . . Betzi Beaton was hailed as the outstanding beauty of the current Follies . . . Bernard Glimble, close friend of Gene Tunney, is an accomplished boxer . . . The third on the right from the entrance is known as "the Douglas Fairbanks table" at Simpson's in London . . . Martinelli has asked for only one autograph in his life—Bob Ripley's.

Katherine Brush is likely plushed in the greatest magnificence of any American novelist. Her wealthy husband, Bob Winans, recently presented her with an octagonal study that is a triumph of modernistic decor. But he is constantly carrying her off to the Riviera, Egypt, Palm Springs and other watering places. Despite these pleasant interruptions, "Kay" keeps up with her contracts. And in touch with friends of her struggling up days. Something rare in the New York typhoon.

Mention of Miss Brush was inspired by catching sight of her while pushing through a revolving door in the Graybar building. I turned to wave, en route, and had to go clear around again. After I get the hang of just which is the salad fork I'm going to learn how to bow in a revolving door even if my neck gets caught and yanked out . . . to here.

Listen World!

By Elsie Robinson

ALL YOU GET out of life is your own feeling about it.

A strange statement? Perhaps you don't believe it. Maybe you're young—excited about those years ahead. You have certain definite ideas about life. You are sure that you can make a success of it, even if others haven't—if you can only get the breaks.

Elsie Robinson

If only you can do what you want to do—if only the right things will happen to you—then everything will b. jake. For life, you are sure, is .he sum total of one's experiences and achievements, and if you have lucky experiences and successful achievements, life is bound to be a happy affair.

Is that what you think? Then you're due for a surprise.

Or maybe you're no' so young. Perhaps you have already advanced far into those waiting years, and have had the experiences and achievements you once thought were so essential. But you're bewildered. In spite of fortunate experiences, lucky achievements, happiness hasn't come.

But why should that be? You have some fine possessions, a pleasant home, loved relations, kindly friends—all these good things at a time when others are living shabbily, desperately. Then why aren't you content?

WHY DOES LIFE SEEM STRANGELY EMPTY — UNREAL — LIKE A DREAM WHICH SLIPS THROUGH YOUR FINGERS AS YOU TRY TO GRASP IT?

"Why, I was actually happier when I was poor and struggling," you say to yourself. "When I was young and didn't know where my next meal was coming from, life seemed much more glorious than it does now."

That is true. You WERE happier then. Life WAS more colorful then, BECAUSE YOUR OWN FEELINGS WERE MORE COLORFUL.

WE GET OUT OF LIFE WHAT WE PUT INTO IT.

Life is as vast or as petty, as exciting or monotonous, as beautiful or ugly, as noble or wretched, as our own feelings about it.

It isn't what happens to you that counts—for the thing that happens to you isn't really you at all.

Nor is it what you achieve that counts—for the thing you achieve is shaped by outward circumstance over which you have no control. And so the thing you achieve isn't really you, either, but it, too, is like a gesture and a dream.

The only thing that counts in life—the only thing that has meaning or reality—the only thing that you really own or can bank on—IS YOUR OWN FEELING ABOUT LIFE.

You can buy countless beautiful articles if you have enough money BUT YOU CAN ONLY EXPERIENCE BEAUTY IF YOU FEEL BEAUTY.

You can become popular and be loved if you have what it takes—BUT YOU CAN ONLY EXPERIENCE LOVE IF YOU FEEL LOVE, IF YOU GIVE LOVE.

You can acquaint yourself with the brave and splendid, mysterious and exciting phases of life by reading about them, traveling, meeting adventurous people — YET LIFE WILL STILL REMAIN DRAB AND DREARY, UNLESS THERE ARE COURAGE AND CURIOSITY IN YOUR OWN HEART.

Life isn't what you do or what you have. LIFE IS ONLY WHAT YOU FEEL. AND YOU CAN FEEL WHAT YOU CHOOSE TO FEEL.

But nobody else can help you with that feeling or enter into it. Even your nearest and dearest cannot become a part of it. Life is your own inner secret "stream of consciousness" for which you alone are responsible—which you alone enjoy or despise.

EXAMPLE

If from others you would learn,
This is all I have to say;
Seek the best; be quick to turn
From the worst that cross your way.

Take your lessons from the strong;
Do as they do if you can,
But refuse to linger long

Copy men whose acts are fair.
Learn the habits of the wise,
Know what courage has to bear.

If to manhood you would grow,
If for real success you thirst,
Ask the finest man you know,
Not the weakest and the worst.

If you would be brave and true,
If you'd walk with head erect,
Let some good man show to you
How to win the world's respect.

Stars and Stripes

Three more Chicago gangsters have been rubbed out. Sort of "automatically" erased.

When Buddy Rogers was asked at the mike whether he and Dorothy Flood are engaged, he took a saxophone from one of his musicians and played: "I don't say yes, and I don't say no." Even a saxophone has to be careful what it says these days.

The auto that ran into the side of Lookout Mountain should have been on the lookout for Lookout Mountain. It isn't the mountain's job to be on the lookout.

"She kissed him and told him she loved him," writes Rupert Hughes. "What more could she do when she didn't love him?" He can't say she done him wrong.
